■■ 25 states sue Trump over forced-labour tariffs

The Angle: Half the country is now in court against the Trump administration over tariffs that sound noble—stopping forced labour in supply chains—but states argue are actually just a workaround after the Supreme Court blocked the original import taxes. It's a major legal and economic showdown.

- 25 U.S. states filed suit Monday against Trump's administration over tariffs designed to target forced labour in global supply chains
- States claim the tariffs are a pretext for replacing import taxes the Supreme Court struck down in February
- The case hinges on whether the administration overstepped by repackaging rejected trade policy under a forced-labour banner

The Legal Loophole Question

- Is this a creative workaround to enforce trade policy, or an abuse of authority—and does the reasoning even matter if consumers end up paying more either way?

LIFESTYLE CHAT

■ Canada green-lights Moderna's new Ebola vaccine trial

The Angle: Health Canada just authorized the first clinical trial for an mRNA Ebola vaccine targeting a specific strain ravaging the DRC right now. It's a real-time test of whether the mRNA tech that worked for COVID can tackle one of the deadliest viruses on the planet—and it matters because this outbreak is still spreading.

- Health Canada authorized Moderna to launch a clinical trial for a vaccine targeting Bundibugyo Ebola virus
- The Bundibugyo form of Ebola is currently surging throughout the Democratic Republic of the Congo
- This is an mRNA vaccine trial—using the same technology platform behind COVID vaccines

The Takeaway

- We went from zero to vaccine trials in a few years on COVID—does this Ebola move prove mRNA tech is actually the game-changer it promised to be, or are we still years away from real protection?

■ Google's Pixel 11 Gets a Tiny Light We Didn't Know We Needed

The Angle: Google is quietly adding a notification light to the Pixel 11's camera bar—a feature that feels like a blast from the phone design past. It's a small detail, but it shows how phone makers are still tinkering with the basics to stand out.

- Google is adding some kind of notification light to the Pixel 11's camera bar
- The feature appears in leaked teaser material, suggesting it's intentional product design, not an accident
- Notification lights were standard on older phones but largely disappeared as manufacturers moved to always-on screens

The Throwback Move

- Do you actually want your phone to have a light that blinks at you, or are we overthinking this?

■■ Michigan Dems' primary battle: Money, Israel, party's future

The Angle: Michigan's Democratic Senate race is shaping up as a high-stakes proxy war over three things that don't usually play well together—big campaign cash, the pro-Israel lobby's influence, and a party fracturing over U.S.-Israel policy. It's happening this week and could signal where Democrats are headed.

- Michigan is hosting a highly competitive and bitter Democratic Senate primary this week
- The race is being framed as a proxy fight over big money in politics, the pro-Israel lobby's power, and the future of U.S.-Israel relations within the Democratic Party

The Proxy Fight

- Is this primary really about Senate seats, or is it the party's civil war over Israel playing out in real time?

■ Doctors perform first-ever womb surgery on unborn baby

The Angle: *A U.K. hospital just pulled off a medical first—operating on a baby inside the womb to repair a life-threatening birth defect before he was even born. The procedure could change how doctors treat gastroschisis, a rare condition where a baby's intestines develop outside the body, potentially saving lives and cutting months of post-birth recovery.*

- Gastroschisis is a birth defect where a baby's intestines develop outside the body; in complex cases, it can be fatal
- Maisie Savage, 29, and her unborn son Theo underwent the pioneering procedure in the U.K.
- Traditional treatment requires surgery after birth followed by months of medical appointments; this in-womb approach aims to sidestep that trajectory

The Medical Marvel Question

- Would you let surgeons operate on your unborn baby if it meant avoiding months of recovery after birth—or does going into the womb feel like too much risk?

■■ Canada's new foreign influence office: transparency, not prevention

The Angle: Canada just launched its first-ever foreign influence commissioner to shine a light on foreign governments trying to sway Canadian politics—but the commissioner is already being clear about what it won't do: actually stop it from happening. It's a significant move on a threat that's become impossible to ignore.

- Canada appointed its first foreign influence commissioner to tackle foreign government interference in Canadian politics
- The commissioner says the office will provide more transparency rather than prevent interference outright
- The focus is giving Canadians visibility into who is trying to influence their politicians and government officials on behalf of foreign governments

The Reality Check

- If a new office can't actually stop foreign interference, is transparency enough—or do we need real enforcement teeth?

■ Nearly 160 migrants rescued after boat fire in Channel crossing

The Angle: A massive rescue operation unfolded in the English Channel as a migrant boat caught fire mid-crossing—one of the largest such operations on record. It's the latest flashpoint in the ongoing Europe-bound migration crisis and raises fresh questions about safety, smuggling routes, and international response.

- Nearly 160 migrants were rescued after a boat caught fire during a Channel crossing
- This marks one of the largest such rescue operations reported since records began in 2018
- The incident underscores ongoing dangers migrants face attempting dangerous sea crossings to reach Europe

The Human Cost

- What responsibility do governments have when people risk their lives on these crossings—and does cracking down on smugglers actually stop people from trying?
