TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (6 stories)

■ This fully non-toxic slow cooker is on my wishlist — and it has a secret coupon on Amazon

The Angle: Non-toxic cookware is having a moment as people get pickier about what's touching their food, and with the holidays coming this is shaping up as a popular gift-to-self upgrade — especially with a hidden discount attached.

- It's being pitched as a fully non-toxic slow cooker — no questionable coatings or materials.
- There's a secret coupon on Amazon quietly knocking the price down.
- Framed as the kitchen upgrade to grab before the holidays hit.

The Shopping Hack

- Do you actually check your cookware for toxic materials, or is this the first time you've even thought about it?

■ 'Live with Kelly and Mark' EP Michael Gelman Teases "More Than One Surprise Guest" Will Materialize On 'Live's "Halloween Shockin' Eve" Show: "You May See A Bunch of Surprises"

The Angle: Live's annual Halloween blowout is a watercooler TV tradition, and EP Michael Gelman just teased it's about to get bigger with multiple surprise guests popping up on air.

- Executive producer Michael Gelman says this year's Halloween episode will feature "more than one surprise guest"
- Gelman's exact tease: "You may see a bunch of surprises"
- The episode is being branded "Halloween Shockin' Eve"
- Gelman told Decider: "We always try to top last year's show and it's always tougher and tougher, but somehow it works out"

The Guessing Game

- Call in your wildest guess for who the surprise guest could be - loser buys coffee if they're way off.

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Guess the Guest - Before the show airs -> Hosts and callers each throw out a guess for who the 'surprise guest(s)' might be - biggest reach gets roasted
- Step 2: Costume Intel - Quick listener poll -> Ask listeners to predict what costumes Kelly and Mark will wear this year, read a few guesses on air
- Step 3: Receipt Check - Day-after follow-up -> Replay the guesses once the episode airs and crown whoever called it closest

■ New York City has begun clearing its nearly 30,000 family childcare waitlist, inviting the first 3,000 families to reapply for vouchers that make childcare completely free.

The Angle: Childcare costs are one of the biggest financial stressors for young families across the whole continent right now, so a major city actually clearing its waitlist and making care free is the kind of win-column story that gets parents everywhere asking 'wait, why can't my city do that?'

- New York City is sitting on a childcare voucher waitlist of nearly 30,000 families.
- The city just started working through it, inviting the first 3,000 families to reapply.
- Families who get through get vouchers that make childcare completely free — not subsidized, free.

The Phone-In Trigger

- Parents, what are you paying for childcare right now — and would you pack up and move to NYC for free care?

■ Florida mother is charged with child neglect, after deputies say she left her 4 kids home alone for 5 days while she went on a work trip to Las Vegas

The Angle: A Florida mom is facing child neglect charges after deputies say she left her four kids to fend for themselves for almost a week while she worked a trip in Vegas — it's the kind of jaw-dropping local court story that turns into an instant parenting debate everywhere.

- Florida mother charged with child neglect
- Deputies say she left her 4 kids home alone
- Duration: 5 days with no adult supervision
- Reason: she was on a work trip to Las Vegas

The Debate Starter

- What age is actually okay to leave kids home alone — and does '5 days for work' change the answer?

■ Police are pulling people over because license plate cameras say their travel patterns look "suspicious"

The Angle: License plate readers are reportedly flagging ordinary driving patterns as red flags, triggering traffic stops with no actual crime involved — a classic privacy-vs-policing flashpoint that taps into real surveillance anxiety.

- Story centers on automated license plate reader (ALPR) systems used by police departments
- Reports describe drivers being pulled over because their travel patterns were flagged as "suspicious" by the cameras, not because of any observed violation
- Surfacing out of r/technology, signaling it's resonating with a tech-and-privacy-minded audience online

The Debate Starter

- If a computer thinks your normal commute looks "suspicious," should that alone be enough for a cop to pull you over?

■ Mass Effect 5 studio was reportedly told to tone down inclusivity by EA after Saudi Arabia buyout, former BioWare dev alleges, "so as to not cause offense"

The Angle: EA just got swallowed up in the biggest buyout in gaming history, backed by Saudi money, and now a former BioWare dev says that's already shaping what's allowed in Mass Effect 5. It's the exact collision point everyone worried about when that deal closed: who gets to decide what's in your favorite game once a different government is cutting the checks.

- A former BioWare developer alleges EA told the Mass Effect 5 team to tone down inclusivity in the game.
- The alleged directive reportedly followed Saudi Arabia's buyout of EA.

- The stated reasoning, according to the allegation: "so as to not cause offense."

The Debate Starter

- Should the people bankrolling a game get a say in what's actually in it — and where's the line between 'business decision' and censorship?

■ Ultra-rich 0.1% produce more carbon pollution than nearly half of humanity while cashing in on the climate disasters they create

The Angle: This one's catnip for a wealth-inequality debate — new research says the richest sliver of the planet pollutes more than nearly half of humanity combined, and critics say they're literally cashing in on the disasters that pollution causes.

- The ultra-rich 0.1% reportedly produce more carbon pollution than nearly half of humanity combined.
- The claim goes further than just emissions — it argues this same group is profiting financially off the climate disasters their lifestyles help fuel.

The Debate Starter

- Should billionaires and private jet owners foot a special bill for the climate disasters they're accused of profiting from?

■ Pete Hoekstra warns Canada that he will personally annex one province for every state Trump loses in midterms

The Angle: A top Trump-world figure publicly threatening to grab Canadian provinces over US midterm losses is the kind of unhinged, borderline-satirical political trash talk that blows up online fast and has an obvious US-Canada relations angle for a North American audience.

- The warning reportedly comes from Pete Hoekstra, tied to the Trump administration's posture toward Canada.
- The threat: annex one Canadian province for every US state Trump loses in the midterms.
- Story is circulating on Reddit's r/canada, suggesting it's already striking a nerve north of the border.

The Debate Starter

- Is this just trash-talk bluster, or does it reflect something real about how Washington actually talks about Canada right now?

■■ U.S. steel CEO's 'confessions' for buying Stelco prompted government to call its lawyers: industry minister

The Angle: A U.S. steel boss apparently said the quiet part out loud about how he landed Stelco, and it was enough to send Canada's government straight to its lawyers — a cross-border business story with real national sovereignty teeth.

- A U.S. steel CEO reportedly made 'confessions' about how he bought Canadian steelmaker Stelco.
- Those comments were apparently serious enough to push the Canadian government to call in its lawyers.
- The claim comes straight from Canada's industry minister, not an anonymous leak.

The Debate Starter

■ Jordan Klepper Says Barack Obama Set A Trap And Donald Trump Fell Right Into It

The Angle: Jordan Klepper is out with a sharp political-comedy take claiming Obama laid a trap for Trump — and Trump stepped right in. It's the kind of take-down clip that gets instantly shared and instantly argued about.

- Jordan Klepper — the Daily Show's go-to guy for Trump coverage — is the one making the claim
- The accusation: Barack Obama set a trap in a recent moment or remark
- Klepper's verdict: Donald Trump walked right into it

The Debate Starter

■ Bryan Adams brings up Epstein files on second diss track against Donald Trump of 2026

The Angle: A bona fide rock legend going out of his way to pick a very public fight with Donald Trump - twice now - is the kind of celebrity-vs-politics collision that gets everyone talking, especially with the Epstein files still one of the hottest-button topics in the news cycle.

- Bryan Adams has released a second diss track targeting Donald Trump
- The new song reportedly name-checks the Epstein files
- It signals an escalating, ongoing feud rather than a one-off shot

The Debate Starter

- Should musicians be throwing political punches in their songs - or should artists like Bryan Adams stay out of it?

The Angle: A sharp-tongued political commentator just publicly diagnosed Trump's whole public persona as a cry for his father's attention - that kind of blunt, personal psychoanalysis of a towering political figure is the exact clip that splits a room and gets phones ringing.

- Abdul El-Sayed flatly calls Donald Trump 'an idiot'
- He argues Trump's one skill is 'the genius of getting attention'
- El-Sayed says it's because Trump's dad 'never gave him enough'
- Calls Trump a 'nepo baby' who uses bullying tactics to get noticed

■■ Canada continues to oppose American embargo on Cuba at UN

The Angle: Canada keeps siding against its closest ally on the world stage, backing the UN vote that slams the decades-old U.S. embargo on Cuba — a reminder that Ottawa and Washington don't always march in lockstep, even on the big stuff.

- Canada is standing with the rest of the UN against the long-running U.S. embargo on Cuba.
- This isn't a one-off — Canada has a history of breaking from Washington on Cuba policy.
- Puts two of each other's biggest allies on opposite sides of a UN vote.

■ He tried to get into Montreal's kosher market. It led to a battle over alleged meat monopoly

The Angle: It sounds niche, but it's a classic David-vs-Goliath monopoly story — a local businessman is accusing a powerful community organization of controlling an entire market through religious certification, and now it's in front of a federal tribunal.

- Mendy Boyarsky is taking his fight to the federal Competition Tribunal
- He alleges the Jewish Community Council of Montreal (JCC) is squeezing out competition in the kosher meat market
- The JCC runs MK Kosher, the certifier that decides what counts as kosher in the city
- The JCC denies the monopoly allegations

■ Quebec to abolish time change

The Angle: Every spring and fall, basically all of North America groans through the clock flip — if Quebec actually pulls the plug on it, that's the kind of change every listener has an opinion on by sundown.

- Quebec is moving to permanently scrap the twice-a-year time change.
- No more 'spring forward, fall back' — the plan is to lock in one time, year-round.
- It puts Quebec in the middle of a debate plenty of provinces and states have flirted with but rarely finished.

■ Doctors swamped with federal workers' sick notes

The Angle: Canadian doctors are reportedly getting buried under a wave of sick-note requests from federal employees - a story that taps right into the ongoing return-to-office tension in the public service and the bigger debate over whether sick notes should even be required for short absences.

- Doctors across Canada say they're being swamped specifically by federal public servants requesting sick notes
- The surge lines up with the broader push-and-pull over federal return-to-office mandates
- Adds fuel to the long-running medical debate over whether employers should require a doctor's note for short-term sick days at all

■ 'Dancing With The Stars' Horror Movie Night Delivers Shocking Double Elimination And Harsh Scores - Forbes

The Angle: Horror Movie Night was supposed to be the fun theme week, but harsh judges' scores and a surprise double elimination turned it into the most talked-about night of the season — exactly the kind of reality-TV gut-punch that gets fans arguing the next morning.

- Horror Movie Night was the theme — but the real scares came from the judges' table, not the routines.
- A double elimination sent two couples home in one night, way more brutal than fans expected.
- Scores were reportedly some of the harshest of the season, with contestants visibly rattled.

The Debate Starter

The Angle: A song that came out decades ago is suddenly topping the charts, proving that in the streaming/TikTok era, a great hook never actually dies — it just waits for its moment to go viral all over again.

- The track is nearly 30 years old and is only now cracking No. 1 on the charts.
- Decades-old songs climbing modern charts has become a real pattern — usually sparked by a TV sync, movie moment, or viral TikTok trend reintroducing it to a new generation.
- It puts the song in rare company with other throwback chart-toppers that proved a hit's shelf life can outlast the artist's whole career.

The Angle: Linda Hamilton has been the heart of the Terminator franchise for over 40 years, so a flat 'I'm out' on any Terminator 7 is a real gut-punch for fans - and it instantly raises the question of whether the series can even survive without her.

- Linda Hamilton says she's done with the franchise, flatly telling press "I'm out" on any future Terminator sequel.
- She's played Sarah Connor on and off since the original 1984 film, including bringing the character back for Dark Fate in 2019.
- Also in casting news: Scout Taylor-Compton's upcoming haunted board game horror movie just added Jamie Alexander, Olivia Holt, and Rohan Campbell.

The Angle: A breathable fabric is basically giving strawberry plants a superhero cape — more fruit, fewer bugs, less spray. It's one of those small science wins that makes you go 'wait, why didn't we think of that sooner?'

- Researchers created a breathable "plant armor" fabric for strawberry fields.

- In field trials, protected plants produced up to 3.56 times more fruit.
- The fabric blocks insects but still lets sunlight, rain, and air pass through.
- Its extra warmth made plants fruit earlier, and it could cut down on pesticide use.
