TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (5 stories)

■ The Met Just Admitted On Camera: 'We Blew It' On Galliano

The Angle: One of the world's most famous museums just told its own donors, to their faces, that honoring a designer convicted of antisemitic abuse was flat-out wrong — and Anna Wintour's name is getting dragged into the fallout. That's a rare public mea culpa from an institution that almost never admits it messed up.

- A source says Met honchos held a hastily called meeting with furious wealthy donors after the backlash.
- Quote from inside the room: "There was a conversation that the process did not work and they made the wrong decision."
- The honoree at the center of it: John Galliano, the designer previously convicted of antisemitic abuse.
- Sources say Met leadership also gave a "shocking take" on Anna Wintour's role in the decision.

The Debate Starter

- Should institutions get credit for admitting 'we got it wrong,' or is this just damage control after the money got loud?

■ Texas just made it legal to fix your own phone

The Angle: Right to Repair is becoming a real nationwide movement, not a niche tech fight — Texas joining in means most of the country is now trending toward giving consumers control over their own gadgets instead of manufacturers gatekeeping repairs.

- Texas's Right to Repair law officially took effect
- Manufacturers of phones, tablets and laptops must now provide parts, tools and manuals to consumers and independent repair shops
- Texas is now the 9th state with Right to Repair protections on the books

The Debate Starter

- Have you ever gotten burned paying a manufacturer's insane price to fix a cracked screen or dead battery instead of just going to a local shop?

■ World's fattest parrot just had its best year ever

The Angle: The k■k■p■ was down to 51 birds and basically a lost cause — now it's at 325 and climbing, proof a decades-long, all-hands conservation grind can actually work. It's a rare good-news science story with a genuinely absurd mascot: a giant, flightless, ground-dwelling parrot.

- The k■k■p■ is the world's heaviest parrot — and it can't fly.
- Population has hit 325 birds, the highest since recovery efforts began.
- The K■k■p■ Recovery Programme started in 1995 with just 51 birds, only 20 of them female.
- 90 chicks from the 2026 breeding season were just added to the official count.

■■ AI Billionaires Are Buying Your Approval on Data Centers

The Angle: Data centers are gobbling up power and water in communities nationwide, and locals are pushing back hard - so now AI giants are reportedly spending big on PR and ad campaigns to win the public over before the backlash grows.

- AI companies are pouring money into campaigns aimed at softening public opinion on new data centers
- The pushback is tied to real community concerns: strain on local power grids and water supplies
- Framed as a battle between tech billionaires' messaging budgets and everyday residents living near these builds

■■ Norway may ban 'pervert glasses' — the spy-cam smart glasses

The Angle: Smart glasses with hidden cameras are already a privacy flashpoint worldwide, and now a whole country is talking about outlawing them for peeping-tom potential — a real test case for where AI wearables cross the line.

- Norway is reportedly weighing a ban on camera-enabled wearable glasses
- Critics have nicknamed the devices 'pervert glasses' over covert-filming concerns
- Comes amid a broader boom in AI smart glasses (like Meta's Ray-Bans) that can secretly record

CANADIAN NEWS (3 stories)

■ Tories reportedly ready to dump Poilievre at first bad sign

The Angle: Whispers of a leadership ultimatum inside the Conservative Party are the kind of Ottawa palace intrigue that turns into a real story fast - especially if it signals Poilievre's grip on his own party is shakier than it looks.

- Report claims Conservative insiders are ready to move on Pierre Poilievre if voters show they're souring on him
- No formal trigger cited yet - this is being framed as a contingency, not an announced plan
- Comes after a rocky stretch for Poilievre, including losing his own seat before returning via byelection

■ Another Marineland Beluga Dead After Chicago Move

The Angle: This is the latest gut-punch in the years-long Marineland saga — a beluga sent south to Chicago's Shedd Aquarium has died, raising fresh questions about whether these relocations are actually saving these whales or just moving the problem.

- Shedd Aquarium in Chicago confirms two whales have died since taking in belugas from Marineland
- The whales came from Marineland in Niagara Falls, Ont., which has faced years of scrutiny over animal care
- This adds to the ongoing fallout from Marineland's beluga population and its uncertain future

■ Tom Cruise co-signs Paramount's Warner Bros. mega-deal

The Angle: Hollywood's biggest merger talk just got a movie-star seal of approval — Tom Cruise is publicly vouching for Paramount's plan to buy Warner Bros. Discovery, which matters to anyone who loves movies since it could reshape what gets made and by whom.

- Tom Cruise made the comments Tuesday on Pat McAfee's show while promoting the 'Days of Thunder' sequel
- Cruise said he's confident Paramount will follow through on its promise to deliver 30 movies per year if the Warner Bros. Discovery deal closes
- Cruise framed his support around movie "abundance" — more films getting made, not fewer

BREAKOUT WATCH (below the show's usual engagement bar - included on editorial judgment, not metrics; producer's call)

■ Florida just made it legal for coaches to pay for your kid's ride home

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): An NFL player's name on a first-of-its-kind law that lets coaches personally fund kids' needs is a rare feel-good/sports crossover with a built-in celebrity hook.
The Angle: Florida signed a law letting K-12 head coaches spend their own money — up to $15,000 a year per team — on food, transportation, and recovery for struggling student athletes, and it's named after former NFL quarterback Teddy Bridgewater for a reason worth telling.

- The law is SB 178, nicknamed the Teddy Bridgewater Act
- It lets K-12 head coaches use personal funds to help students in need
- Covers things like food, transportation, and recovery services "in good faith"
- Capped at $15,000 per team, per year

The Feel-Good Debate

- Would you want your kid's coach personally footing the bill — or does that cross a line schools should be funding instead?

■ LG built a virtual girl group... to sing about washing machines

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A virtual K-pop-style girl group singing about washing machines is the exact flavor of absurdist tech-meets-pop-culture oddity that reliably spreads on social feeds.
The Angle: K-pop-style virtual idols are already a real (and huge) trend, but LG just merged it with laundry appliances — it's the kind of corporate-meets-pop-culture mashup that's tailor-made for a 'wait, what?' kicker moment.

- LG rolled out a virtual girl group to promote its washing machines
- The group's debut single is literally titled "I Wash"
- Story surfaced via r/nottheonion, which tells you exactly the reaction it's getting online

The So-Bad-It's-Good Award

- Genius viral marketing or the most desperate appliance ad ever made — you decide.

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Cue the single - 30 seconds, cold open -> Play a clip of "I Wash" with zero context and let it land
- Step 2: Guess the product - Quick back-and-forth -> Ask co-host to guess what's being advertised before revealing it's washing machines
- Step 3: Rate the jingle - Wrap-up -> Hosts give it a score out of 10 for 'catchy' vs. 'unhinged'

■ Mbappé's kidnappers allegedly ran the plot from a jail cell

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Mbappé's global fame plus the bizarre 'plot run from prison' detail gives this the surprise-and-star-power combo that drives crossover pickup beyond soccer fans.
The Angle: One of the most famous athletes on the planet was reportedly the target of a kidnapping scheme masterminded from inside a French prison - it's the kind of headline that sounds made up, which is exactly why it's a perfect kicker.

- Kylian Mbappé, the French soccer superstar, was allegedly targeted in a kidnapping plot
- The scheme was reportedly organized from inside a French prison

- Story is real enough that it's making the rounds specifically because it reads like satire

The Reality Check

- Guess the real headline vs. the fake one - because at this point, can you even tell?

■ PBR will pay you $20K to track down its missing beer

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A beloved beer brand offering a cash reward for its own 'missing' product is a tailor-made, low-effort meme that shareable accounts love to amplify.
The Angle: A beloved cheap-beer brand dangling a five-figure reward for lost booze is the exact kind of absurd, low-stakes mystery that makes for a great last laugh before the show wraps.

- Pabst Blue Ribbon is offering a $20,000 reward for help finding its missing beer.
- Story picked up steam on Reddit's r/nottheonion, a sub for real headlines that sound fake.

The Debate Starter

- Would you turn amateur detective for $20K worth of PBR money?

■ AI helped plan their climb. Rescuers had to finish it.

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): It's a real-world cautionary tale about over-trusting AI that lands right in the current wave of AI-skepticism discourse, giving it built-in trend alignment.
The Angle: Three climbers got stranded on Mount Shasta after leaning on AI to plan their route — a real-world test of how much people are starting to trust chatbots with life-or-death decisions, and it's got tech circles buzzing.

- Three climbers needed rescue on Mount Shasta
- The group had used AI to help plan the climb

The Debate Starter

- Would you trust a chatbot to plan a trip where one bad call could get you killed?
