■■ Convoy leader Pat King faces harsher sentencing after appeal loss

The Angle: Pat King, one of the faces of the 2022 Freedom Convoy that gridlocked Ottawa, is heading back to court for a tougher sentence. A provincial appeals court just ruled his original punishment wasn't tough enough—reopening a polarizing chapter in Canadian protest history.

- Pat King was a key organizer of the 2022 convoy protests
- The Ontario Court of Appeal sided with Crown prosecutors on the sentencing challenge
- Prosecutors argued King's original punishment was too lenient
- King will now face re-sentencing after the appeal court decision

The Heat Check

- Did the original sentence let him off easy, or is this appeals court being too harsh? Where do you land on that?

■ Mexico won't ditch Canada for U.S. trade deal, says foreign secretary

The Angle: As Trump administration trade tensions heat up, Mexico's signaling it's not interested in peeling off from the USMCA trilateral pact—a key test of whether North American trade unity holds or splinters under pressure.

- Mexico's foreign secretary stated the country won't pursue a side deal with the U.S. that would leave Canada out of the trilateral trade arrangement
- The statement comes amid broader Trump administration trade tensions and speculation about bilateral deals replacing the existing USMCA framework
- Mexico is publicly committing to the trilateral trade pact rather than abandoning it for separate negotiations

The Trade Reality Check

- Will Mexico actually hold that line, or is this just diplomatic posturing before the real negotiations begin?

■ Chloe Fineman leaving SNL after seven seasons

The Angle: A major cast member is exiting one of TV's most iconic shows after a solid seven-year run. Fineman's departure adds to the ongoing turnover at SNL—always a big moment for late-night culture watchers and a signal of where the show is headed next.

- Chloe Fineman announced her exit from Saturday Night Live via Instagram on Thursday

- She's been a cast member for seven seasons

The Hot Take

- What's Fineman's best SNL character you'll actually miss—and who do you think should replace her?

TRENDING TODAY

■ Missing Alberta kids may be spotted in B.C., RCMP says

The Angle: An Amber Alert from July 8 is back in the headlines after police suggest two abducted children could be in British Columbia. It's a developing search that crosses provincial lines and keeps the case in the public eye when tip-offs matter most.

- RCMP issued an Amber Alert on July 8 that was later rescinded
- The children were abducted from Alberta
- Police now believe they may be in British Columbia

The Public Alert Angle

- If you're in B.C. or Alberta—have you seen anything, or do you know how these cross-border searches actually work when a kid goes missing?

LIFESTYLE CHAT

■ The Dating Double Standard Nobody Wants to Admit

The Angle: A viral take is sparking the age-old 'why do we have different standards?' debate online—and honestly, it's hitting a nerve because both sides kind of have a point. This is the conversation people are actually having with their friends right now.

- Tweet from @WomenBeingAwful is gaining traction comparing what happens when dating standards flip
- The premise is poking at the gap between what people say they want in partners versus who they actually pursue

The Double Standard Debate

- Do you think dating expectations are genuinely different for men versus women, or are we all just kidding ourselves about who we'd actually date?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Setup - First 90 seconds -> Hosts acknowledge the viral premise and admit which dating standards they've either benefited from or felt burned by—keep it real and a little self-aware.
- Step 2: The Caller Test - Phone segment -> Take calls from listeners: 'Has a dating standard ever surprised you when you realized it applied differently to you than your friends?' Get specific stories, not just hot takes.
- Step 3: The Plot Twist - Closer -> Hosts land on the actual insight: maybe the issue isn't the standards themselves, but that we pretend they don't exist. Ties back to why this tweet is resonating.

■ The 'I Don't Hate Women' Defense Goes Viral

The Angle: A viral X post about being misunderstood as a woman-hater is sparking the internet's favorite debate: can you criticize behavior without criticizing an entire group? It's hitting a nerve because everyone's been accused of something they didn't mean.

- A post from @WomenBeingAwful went viral with the statement: 'It never fails to amuse me when someone thinks I hate women. I don't.'
- The author clarifies: many of their close friends both IRL and on X are women
- The core tension: they say they don't hate women, they hate 'certain behaviors, traits, and ideologies' that they associate with modern culture

The Misunderstanding Starter

- Have you ever had your criticism of something get flipped into 'you hate [entire group]'? What's the line between calling out behavior and calling out people?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Accusation Hall of Fame - Quick round, 2 minutes -> Hosts rapid-fire share times they've been accused of hating/attacking a whole group when they were only critiquing one thing—then open it to callers for their own examples
- Step 2: The Translation Game - Pick a call, 3 minutes -> A caller describes a criticism they've made and got misread as hate; hosts reframe it to show the difference between 'I dislike this behavior' vs. 'I dislike this group'

■ Cyclospora outbreak spreading across multiple states—what you need to know

The Angle: A nasty parasitic infection called cyclospora is popping up in more places than just one city—health officials are tracking cases across multiple states and counties. If you eat fresh produce, this is worth a five-minute conversation about what's actually happening and how to protect yourself.

- Cyclospora outbreak is spreading beyond Hamilton County, Ohio to additional counties and states
- Cyclosporiasis causes severe gastrointestinal illness—typically diarrhea, nausea, and abdominal cramping that can last weeks
- The parasite is most commonly linked to contaminated fresh produce, particularly leafy greens and berries

The Produce Aisle Reality Check

- Have you or anyone you know dealt with cyclospora or a mystery stomach bug from produce—and how paranoid does an outbreak like this actually make you about your salad?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Define the Beast - First 90 seconds -> Host explains what cyclospora actually is—it's a parasite, not bacteria; where it comes from; and why it's different from regular food poisoning. Keep it real but not gross.
- Step 2: The Produce Question - Next 2 minutes -> Co-host asks: 'Are we talking lettuce, berries, herbs—what specific produce are people getting nailed by?' Tie it to what listeners actually buy at the grocery store this week.
- Step 3: Listener Callout - Open the lines -> Ask listeners: Have you had cyclospora? Did you know what it was at the time? How did you handle it? This normalizes the conversation and gets real stories.
- Step 4: The Prevention Takeaway - Final 60 seconds -> Wrap with practical steps: wash produce, know which items are higher-risk, when to see a doctor. Make it actionable, not alarmist.

CLOSER: WHAT THE FRIDAY

■ Bryson DeChambeau's weird walk costs him two strokes at The Open

The Angle: In a bizarre twist at golf's oldest major championship, Bryson DeChambeau got penalized two strokes after personally escorting rules officials back to a hole to fight an allegation—and it backfired spectacularly. It's the kind of "I'll prove my innocence" moment that somehow made things worse.

- Bryson DeChambeau was penalized two strokes during his second round at Royal Birkdale (The Open Championship)
- The penalty came after DeChambeau took rules officials on a field trip to the fifth hole to dispute an allegation against him
- The incident is being called "one of the more bizarre scenes in major championship memory"

The Backfire Moment

- Have you ever tried to prove you were innocent and accidentally made yourself look MORE guilty? That's Bryson's Friday night right here.

■■ First Nations sound alarm over Alberta separatism threat

The Angle: Indigenous leaders across Canada are warning that if Alberta leaves Confederation, it could unravel century-old treaty agreements that protect their lands and sovereignty. It's a constitutional curveball nobody's talking about yet—but First Nations are making noise now.

- First Nations chiefs are calling on federal and provincial governments to explicitly protect treaty rights against potential threats from Alberta separatism
- Treaty obligations span multiple provinces and predate Canada's current constitution—Alberta separation could create legal uncertainty over who's bound by what
- Indigenous groups worry a separate Alberta could challenge or renegotiate treaties that guarantee hunting, fishing, and land rights across provincial boundaries

The Constitutional Blind Spot

- How many Canadians even know treaties could be on the table if a province actually left—and what does that mean for Indigenous sovereignty?
