TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (5 stories)

■ FDA Just Approved a Breakthrough Pancreatic Cancer Drug

The Angle: Pancreatic cancer has one of the lowest survival rates of any major cancer, so a newly approved drug targeting it is genuinely rare good news — and it's the kind of hopeful health story that resonates way beyond any one city or fanbase.

- The U.S. has approved a new drug aimed squarely at pancreatic cancer.
- Pancreatic cancer is widely considered one of the most intractable, hardest-to-treat cancers out there.
- Doctors and researchers are calling this approval the start of a "new era" for the disease.
- The story is making the rounds on r/upliftingnews — a rare bright spot in cancer research headlines.

The Phone-In Trigger

- Ask listeners: has pancreatic cancer touched your family, and does news like this actually give you hope?

■ Water polo player turns spectator, saves three drowning girls

The Angle: A college athlete waiting to watch the Blue Angels ended up being the real hero of the day, diving into Lake Washington to pull three girls out of the water — this is the kind of split-second heroism story that stops people in their tracks and gets shared everywhere.

- A UC Davis water polo player was at a Seattle festival to watch the Blue Angels when she noticed 3 girls struggling to breathe in Lake Washington.
- She jumped in and rescued all three girls.
- One of the girls was unconscious and tangled in a buoy rope when she pulled her out.
- She was later knighted by Seafair for the rescue.

The Everyday Hero Moment

- Callers — have you ever had to jump into action in a real emergency, and did your training actually kick in when it counted?

■■ Lawmakers want 'creep glasses' banned before they hit shelves

The Angle: Smart glasses that can secretly ID strangers and snap photos are sparking a push to block them at the border entirely — a privacy fight that hits everyone who's ever worried about being recorded without knowing it.

- Push underway to ban importing a category of AI smart glasses over privacy concerns
- Critics have nicknamed the tech 'pervert' glasses over covert photo/ID capabilities
- Debate centers on the line between wearable tech innovation and surveillance without consent

The Debate Starter

- Should tech that can secretly ID a stranger on the street be legal to sell at all?

■ Cities Are Quietly Dumping Their License Plate Cameras

The Angle: A growing wave of cities and local governments are canceling contracts with Flock Safety, the company behind those license-plate-reading camera networks - it's turning into a national flashpoint over surveillance, data-sharing, and who's actually watching the watchers.

- Flock Safety's automatic license-plate-reader cameras are installed by police departments and cities across the U.S. and Canada
- A growing number of cities and other jurisdictions are now pulling out of their contracts with the company
- The cancellations are tied to mounting concerns over surveillance overreach, data-sharing, and privacy

The Debate Starter

- Safety tool or surveillance creep - would you want these cameras tracking every car in and out of your neighborhood?

■ One Employee's $28K AI Bill Got Everyone at Microsoft Watched

The Angle: AI tools are quietly draining corporate budgets, and one employee's insane spending spree just got the whole company put under surveillance - it's the ultimate 'one bad apple ruins it for everyone' workplace story, and with AI subscriptions everywhere now, your listeners have probably felt this same tension at their own jobs.

- One Microsoft employee reportedly spent $28,000 on AI tools in just 28 days.
- The spending spree was apparently big enough to trigger a company-wide response.
- Microsoft is now reportedly monitoring employee AI usage across the board.

The Debate Starter

■ This company got tariff money back — and gave it to you

The Angle: In a year of everyone griping about tariffs jacking up prices, one small gaming company is doing the opposite and actually mailing the money back to customers — that's the kind of corporate move people don't expect and can't stop talking about.

- Panic, the indie publisher behind the Playdate handheld, is refunding U.S. customers the tariff costs they were charged
- The company says it's passing the money straight back to the people who paid it
- Panic's reasoning, in their own words: "It just felt like the right thing to do"

■ Lab-Grown Milk Could Ditch Cows Almost Entirely

The Angle: This is the kind of "wait, what?" science story that gets people arguing at the breakfast table - real dairy proteins made by engineered yeast instead of cows, with a wild land-use number attached.

- The method is called precision fermentation - using genetically engineered yeast or fungi to produce actual dairy proteins, not a plant-based substitute.
- Researchers say switching to this process could shrink milk's land footprint by up to 96% compared to traditional cow's milk.
- It's not almond or oat milk - the pitch is it's chemically the same dairy protein, just grown in a fermentation tank instead of a cow.

The Debate Starter

- If it tastes and pours exactly like milk but never came near a cow, would you still call it "real" milk - and would you drink it?

■ Is This Social Media's Big Tobacco Moment?

The Angle: Word is a landmark agreement could shape how social platforms operate going forward, with people drawing a direct line to the tobacco industry's historic reckoning in the '90s - that's a big claim, and it's got people talking about whether Big Tech is finally facing real accountability.

- The comparison on the table: this could be social media's version of the tobacco industry's landmark legal reckoning.
- Being framed as a historic agreement with the power to reshape the future of platforms.

The Debate Starter

■ Chapman's says no price hike as they ditch U.S. suppliers

The Angle: It's the classic elbows-up Canadian story - a homegrown ice cream brand cutting ties with U.S. suppliers over the trade fight, and promising your cone won't cost more because of it.

- Chapman's Ice Cream, the Ontario-based company, says it's shifting away from U.S. suppliers
- The company is pledging no price increase for customers despite the supply chain shift
- Fits the broader wave of Canadian companies leaning into 'Buy Canadian' sentiment amid trade tensions

■■ U.S. backs off demanding Canada ditch its content rules

The Angle: This is a real trade-and-culture flashpoint — Washington reportedly pulling back on pressuring Canada to gut Canadian content quotas and bilingual packaging rules, which touches everything from what's on your radio dial to what's printed on a cereal box.

- Canadian minister Dominic LeBlanc is the one confirming the U.S. is stepping back
- The demands reportedly targeted Canadian content rules — the CanCon quotas that shape what airs on Canadian radio and TV
- Also on the chopping block: bilingual labelling requirements, the English/French rules on packaged products sold in Canada
- Frames as a U.S. 'withdrawal' of demands, suggesting a win in ongoing trade talks

- Canada is imposing a 50% tariff on US copper wire
- The tariff also applies to US wood charcoal
- Comes amid the broader back-and-forth trade tension between Canada and the US

■ Carney Says No Way to Trump Renaming Lake Ontario

The Angle: A US-Canada spat over the name of one of the Great Lakes sounds absurd on its face, but it taps straight into the raw nerve of sovereignty and Trump's ongoing needling of Canada - easy watercooler bait for a Canadian audience.

- PM Mark Carney is publicly pushing back on a reported order from President Trump to rename Lake Ontario.
- The clash centers on one of the Great Lakes, a body of water shared between Canada and the US.
- Details are still thin - this is breaking from the headline, more context expected to develop.

The Debate Starter

■ Bethenny Frankel's $30 fish-egg eye patches are breaking Amazon

The Angle: A 'Real Housewives' icon plugging caviar eye patches is exactly the kind of only-in-2026 skincare trend that makes for easy, relatable banter - and it's a great excuse to ask what weird stuff is actually in your hosts' medicine cabinets.

- Bethenny Frankel, the 'RHONY' alum turned mogul, rolled out her Amazon favorites picks for August
- Caviar eye patches made her list, with shoppers calling them the 'secret to hydrated, glowing skin'
- The pick taps into skincare's ongoing obsession with unlikely ingredients - fish roe extract for under-eye puffiness

■ CNN Mixes Up Dolly Parton With Her Impersonator On Air

The Angle: A cable news giant fumbling something as basic as a photo during coverage of a beloved icon's passing is the kind of on-brand chaos that always gets people talking - and it's a gift for hosts riffing on media blunders.

- CNN issued an on-air apology after running a photo of a Dolly Parton impersonator instead of the real singer during a report on her death
- The mix-up happened during coverage meant to honor the late country music legend

■■ Garfield's Wildest Spidey Pitch: A Bi Peter Parker, MJ Played By a Man

The Angle: Andrew Garfield revealing a scrapped, way-more-daring version of his Spider-Man run is pure fan-forum gold — it reopens the 'what if' game and doubles as a live temperature check on how far superhero franchises should push representation.

- Andrew Garfield says he pitched making Peter Parker bisexual during his Spider-Man era.
- His dream casting for the male love interest: Michael B. Jordan, subbing in for the classic Mary Jane role.
- The pitch reportedly never made it into the films that hit theaters.

The Angle: A deeply personal detail from Dolly Parton's family is making the rounds online, and it taps into the huge well of goodwill fans already have for her - a reminder of the generosity that's basically her brand.

- The claim comes from Dolly Parton's sister, posted as part of an online tribute.
- She says Dolly was willing to try experimental cancer drugs.
- The reported reason: not for herself, but to help future patients.

The Angle: Flags at half-staff are usually reserved for heads of state and tragedy - so the length of the tribute for Dolly Parton outlasting Pope Francis, Charlie Kirk, and Lindsey Graham is the kind of oddly specific comparison that gets people talking about who we honor and why.

- Flags are being flown at half-staff for Dolly Parton longer than they were for Pope Francis
- Her tribute period also outlasts the half-staff order given for Charlie Kirk
- And it beats the flag tribute for Senator Lindsey Graham too

LIFESTYLE CHAT

■ Turns out city noise is ruining nature's chill pill

The Angle: Everyone's got a birdsong playlist or a rain-sounds app for stress relief — turns out even a little traffic noise in the background quietly cancels out the calm, which explains why your 'relaxing' commute soundscape might be doing nothing.

- Researchers say even low levels of traffic noise are enough to cancel out the calming effects of nature sounds
- Birdsong rated as one of the most relaxing elements people pick out in nature soundscapes
- The mood-boosting effect isn't reduced by traffic noise, it's straight-up drowned out, per the study

The Debate Starter

BREAKOUT WATCH (below the show's usual engagement bar - included on editorial judgment, not metrics; producer's call)

■ Meta's Paying Up To $18 Billion To Lock Down Teen Accounts

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): This is a landmark $18B Meta youth-safety settlement with default under-18 restrictions across FB/Instagram, and it's already generating a second angle in the AI-regulation op-ed (story 10) — that cross-thread duplication signals real momentum on a topic (kids + Big Tech) that reliably breaks out.
The Angle: This is a huge story for any parent with a teenager online — Meta just agreed to a massive payout AND baked-in safety restrictions that automatically kick in for every under-18 user on Facebook and Instagram, no opt-in required.

- Meta agreed to pay up to $18 billion
- Default restrictions will now apply to every user under 18 across Facebook and Instagram
- The changes reportedly happen automatically, not as an optional setting parents have to turn on

The Parent Debate

- Does an $18 billion check actually change how these apps treat your kid, or is this just the cost of doing business for Meta?

■ Politicians of Both Parties Suddenly Turn on Data Centers

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Bipartisan political reversal on data centers — both parties souring in swing states — is a rare 'both sides agree' storyline that taps directly into the growing public backlash over AI infrastructure costs and land/water use, a trend just hitting critical mass.
The Angle: AI's data center boom was sold as an economic win, but voters everywhere are souring on the power bills, water use, and noise that come with it — and now Democrats and Republicans in battleground states are scrambling to distance themselves before it becomes a campaign liability.

- Public support for data centers is cratering nationally, per new reporting.
- Politicians from both parties are making a sudden U-turn, adopting a much more skeptical tone.
- The shift is especially notable in battleground states, where the issue is turning politically risky.

The Debate Starter

- Would you want a massive AI data center built in your backyard — or is this just NIMBY-ism dressed up as policy?

■ Ring just locked cops out of your doorbell footage

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Ring quietly limiting what it can hand police is a surprising reversal from a brand synonymous with police partnerships, and privacy-vs-surveillance stories involving a household name tend to spike hard once people notice the irony.
The Angle: Ring cameras are in millions of homes across North America, and this move plants them right in the middle of the privacy-vs-policing fight - it's the kind of tech story that touches almost everyone's front porch.

- Ring is rolling out something it's calling "Throw Away the Key Encryption" (TAKE)
- The new method is becoming the default on all Ring cameras
- The whole point: it limits what Ring itself can hand over to police, even when asked

The Debate Starter

- Does locking out police from your doorbell footage make you feel safer - or does it just protect the guy stealing your packages?

■ KATSEYE Out, Devon Again In — Ankle Injury Shakes Up Festival

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): The KATSEYE/Olivia Rodrigo festival swap is independently trending on two different outlets (r/fauxmoi and Variety) within the same window, and KATSEYE's young, hyper-engaged fanbase is exactly the audience that turns a lineup change into a viral moment.
The Angle: A last-minute festival lineup swap always gets fans talking, and this one's got a built-in mystery: how bad is this injury that a whole group had to bow out?

- KATSEYE was pulled from the Daisy Chain Fields festival lineup
- Devon Again has been brought in as the replacement act
- The reported reason: KATSEYE member Megan is dealing with a sprained ankle

The Fan Reaction Check

- Festival-goers with tickets — are you still hyped for Devon Again, or is this a refund-request moment?

■■ The U.S. is cutting an oil deal with... Venezuela?

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A US deal for long-term access to Venezuela's oil reserves is a major geopolitical/economic shift that plugs directly into ongoing Venezuela tension coverage and has the kind of policy weight that tends to escalate once other outlets pick it up.
The Angle: This is a major potential shift in U.S. foreign policy toward a country Washington has sanctioned and clashed with for years — and it lands right as gas prices and energy security stay top of mind for voters.

- CTV News reports the U.S. is nearing a deal for long-term access to Venezuela's oil reserves
- The report is sourced anonymously — "sources say," no officials confirming on record yet
- No terms, timeline, or details on what Venezuela gets in return have been reported

The Debate Starter

- If cheaper, closer oil means warming up to a government we've sanctioned for years — is that a trade-off worth making?

■ John Mayer: Dolly's Death United a 'Fractured World'

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A celebrity of John Mayer's stature publicly reflecting on Dolly Parton's death, paired with an on-brand guitar tribute, is the kind of high-emotion, big-name tribute moment that consistently overperforms on entertainment feeds.
The Angle: Dolly Parton's passing already had the whole country talking, and now John Mayer is adding fuel with an emotional tribute and his own electric guitar cover of 'I Will Always Love You' - it's the kind of celebrity moment that crosses every demographic.

- John Mayer says Dolly Parton's death brought a 'fractured world' together
- He shared his own electric guitar spin on 'I Will Always Love You' as a tribute

The Watercooler Moment

- Ask listeners: what's the one Dolly song that hit you hardest this week?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Play the Clip - 30 seconds, cold open -> Cue up John Mayer's guitar cover of 'I Will Always Love You' and let it play before either host talks.
- Step 2: Host Reaction - Unscripted, gut reaction -> Each host gives an honest first reaction to the cover - does it work as an instrumental, or does it need the vocal?

- Step 3: Phone Line Open - 2-3 minutes -> Take calls/texts on listeners' favorite Dolly memory or tribute they've seen this week.
