■■ Matt Barnes says no podcast guest ever topped Kobe

The Angle: Kobe Bryant's legacy still hits different, and Matt Barnes going on record about his best-ever interview guest is exactly the kind of nostalgic, emotional NBA story that gets people talking beyond just hoops fans.

- Matt Barnes says Kobe Bryant is the best guest he's ever had on "All the Smoke"
- The claim comes from an exclusive interview, meaning no other guest since has come close
- Kobe appeared on the show as part of its run of raw, unfiltered athlete conversations

The Debate Starter

- Who's YOUR all-time favorite podcast guest interview - and could anyone ever top it?

■ GTA 6 Just Won a Gamer's Trust Vote

The Angle: This is the most anticipated video game release in years, and the buzz right now isn't about the map or the story — it's about what's NOT in it: no pay-to-win microtransactions, no generative AI. That's a direct answer to two of gaming's biggest fan complaints.

- Grand Theft Auto 6 is reportedly shipping with no microtransactions
- Developers also confirmed no generative AI was used in building the game
- Both moves push back directly against two of gaming's most hated modern trends

The Debate Starter

- Does knowing a game skipped AI and microtransactions actually make you more likely to buy it, or is that just marketing spin?

■ This company got a tariff refund — and actually gave it back

The Angle: Tariffs have been squeezing prices on everything from cars to gadgets, so when a company actually hands refund money BACK to customers instead of pocketing it, that's a rare enough move to spark a real conversation about trust and corporate goodwill.

- Panic, the indie publisher behind the Playdate handheld, is refunding tariff money directly to customers who paid it
- Company's reasoning, in their own words: "It just felt like the right thing to do"
- Move ties directly into the ongoing U.S. President's tariff policy and how it's hitting import-reliant tech makers

The Good Business Debate

■■ Is this social media's 'tobacco moment'?

The Angle: A new agreement is being compared to the landmark tobacco settlements that reshaped an entire industry - which means regulators may finally be treating social platforms like a public health issue instead of just a business.

■ Ukraine's drones just doubled their kill range with balloons

The Angle: It's a MacGyver-level battlefield hack — strap a cheap drone to a balloon, let it float most of the way there, and suddenly a $500 weapon can hit twice as far. That's the kind of low-cost innovation that reshapes how wars get fought, and it's raising real questions about what's next in drone warfare.

- Ukraine says its Hornet drone can double its range from 150km to 300km using this method
- The drone rides a high-altitude balloon (aerostat) during transit instead of flying under its own power
- During that ride, the Hornet used only 5% of its battery, saving nearly a full charge for the actual strike
- The tactic is already being used for both FPV drones and mid-strike systems, per Under Fire News

The Debate Starter

- If a dollar-store balloon trick can double a killer drone's range, how long before this shows up outside a war zone?

■ Carney trolls Trump with a savage Great Lakes rename

The Angle: A satirical headline blowing up on Reddit's r/canada imagines PM Mark Carney rebranding the Great Lakes just to needle Trump amid the ongoing "51st state" tension - it's the kind of petty-but-hilarious cross-border jab that always gets a studio laughing.

- The joke headline has Mark Carney renaming the rest of the Great Lakes to "Lake Legal Adult"
- It's framed as a way to make sure Trump "will never want to touch" them
- It's circulating as a meme/joke post on Reddit's r/canada, not an actual government announcement
- It plays off the real ongoing friction between Trump and Carney over Trump's talk of Canada as the "51st state"

The Punchline Test

- Get the hosts to pitch their own fake Trump-proof renamings for other Canadian landmarks live on air.

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Set up the joke - 15 seconds -> Read the fake headline straight, let the absurdity land before explaining it's satire.
- Step 2: Host reactions - 30 seconds -> Each host rates the joke 1-10 and says whether it's actually funny or trying too hard.
- Step 3: Build your own - 1 minute -> Hosts invent their own satirical 'Trump-proof' renamings for other famous Canadian spots (CN Tower, Niagara Falls, etc.).

■■ Trump Wants to Rename Lake Ontario 'Lake America'

The Angle: A U.S. president trying to rename a lake Canada and the U.S. literally share is instant cross-border outrage bait, and it's already blowing up on r/canada - this is the kind of story that writes its own debate.

- Reports say Trump signed an order to rename Lake Ontario to 'Lake America'.
- Lake Ontario is one of the Great Lakes shared by both the U.S. and Canada - not a lake he can just unilaterally rename.
- Story is circulating out of r/canada, where reaction is reportedly heated.

The Debate Starter

- Phone lines: if another country tried to rename a lake on YOUR border without asking, how mad would you actually be?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Rename That Landmark - 60-90 second live bit -> Hosts each pick a shared U.S./Canada landmark and give it an over-the-top nationalistic rename on the spot, then vote on the best/worst one.

■■ Canada Slaps 50% Tariffs on US Copper Wire, Charcoal

The Angle: The trade fight with the US just got another layer - Canada's firing back with steep tariffs on specific American goods, and it's the kind of tit-for-tat that trickles down to prices at the hardware store and the backyard barbecue.

- Canada is adding 50% tariffs on US-made copper wire
- Wood charcoal imports from the US also get hit with the 50% tariff

■■ Trump wants Lake Ontario renamed — Carney says not a chance

The Angle: It sounds like a joke until you realize it's another shot in the ongoing Trump-vs-Canada sovereignty spat, and "renaming one of the Great Lakes" is exactly the kind of absurd-but-real headline that gets a whole country talking.

- PM Mark Carney is pushing back on a Trump order targeting the name of Lake Ontario
- The move is being read as part of the broader US-Canada tension over sovereignty and territory
- Story is circulating out of r/canada, source details are still thin beyond the headline

■ Carney throws shade with a geography lesson

The Angle: Canada's PM just took a not-so-subtle shot at the whole "rename it" trend by pointing out Lake Ontario's name is older than both countries - a classic polite-but-pointed Canadian own.

- Mark Carney says the name "Lake Ontario" is more than 400 years old
- He notes it predates both Canadian Confederation and the U.S. Declaration of Independence

The Angle: Meta just settled a massive U.S. lawsuit over harming kids online, and now teen accounts are actually changing - this is the rare case where a tech giant got forced to act, and every parent with a teenager on these apps should care.

- Meta agreed to an $18-billion US settlement tied to claims its platforms caused online harms to youth
- The settlement is forcing real changes to how teen accounts function on Instagram and Facebook
- Experts tell CBC News it's still unclear exactly how widely these changes will roll out
- The bigger question researchers are raising: what actual impact this will have going forward

■ Trump wants to rename Lake Ontario — Canada's raising an eyebrow

The Angle: A president trying to rename a body of water two countries share is instant watercooler fodder, but the real story is what the stunt is distracting from: quiet cuts to U.S.-Canada science teamwork on the Great Lakes.

- Lake Ontario's name predates European colonization of the Americas.
- It's been recognized internationally under that name for centuries.
- It's legally unclear whether Trump can even unilaterally rename the lake.
- The renaming push comes alongside the Trump administration holding back joint U.S.-Canada research and restoration work on the Great Lakes.

■ Coyote vs. Acme hits theatres — and it's secretly anti-capitalist

The Angle: The long-shelved Looney Tunes lawsuit comedy finally opens in theatres, and CBC is using it as an excuse to run down the best "eat the rich" movies ever made — perfect hook for a pop culture chat about corporate villains on screen.

- Coyote vs. Acme opens in theatres Aug. 28
- The film reimagines Wile E. Coyote suing the Acme Corporation for all his cartoon injuries

- CBC calls it the newest entry in the "pantheon of anti-capitalist films"

■ Ed Department's 'Nazi Germany' Post Was Actually... a Movie Quote

The Angle: A U.S. Department of Education social post got read as comparing the Trump administration to Nazi Germany, but it traces back to a misfired quote from an Oscar-winning war film - a classic government-social-media faceplant that's tailor-made for hosts to riff on.

- The U.S. Department of Education posted a clip that critics said compared the Trump administration to Nazi Germany
- The line actually came from the 2017 Oscar-winning film 'Darkest Hour', built around a 'tiger' quote pulled out of context
- Backlash hit fast online, and the department deleted the post

■ Taylor Lautner might name his baby... Taylor

The Angle: Twilight heartthrob Taylor Lautner married a woman named Taylor, and now they're expecting - and actually considering doubling down on the name. It's the kind of delightfully weird celebrity trivia that makes for an easy laugh to close the show.

- Taylor Lautner is married to Taylor Lautner (yes, her name was already Taylor before the wedding).
- The couple is expecting a baby and has floated naming the kid "Taylor" too.
- Taylor (the wife) has admitted to feeling real pressure around picking the name, given the obvious matchy-matchy problem.

The Debate Starter

- Three Taylors under one roof - adorable or a nightmare at Thanksgiving roll call?

BREAKOUT WATCH (below the show's usual engagement bar - included on editorial judgment, not metrics; producer's call)

■ California tires now come with a gas-mileage report card

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Hits a universal pocketbook nerve ($1B in savings, an overlooked cost) with a simple, sticky visual hook (a 'leaf' rating on tires) that consumer/uplifting audiences reliably share.
The Angle: New state rules slap a 'fuel efficiency leaf' rating on tires because most drivers have no idea their tires are quietly draining their gas mileage - and the fix could save the state $1 billion a year at the pump.

- California is rolling out new tire efficiency standards aimed at cutting fuel waste
- The push could save drivers an estimated $1 billion a year collectively
- A new 'leaf' rating label lets shoppers compare tires by fuel efficiency, similar to appliance energy stickers
- Tire rolling resistance is an overlooked drag on fuel economy most drivers never think about

The Wallet Check

- Have you ever once considered fuel efficiency when buying tires - or is this the first you're hearing it's even a thing?

■ NHS Mailing Free At-Home Cervical Cancer Test Kits

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A free-at-home screening rollout to 4 million women is a massive, concrete number with a clear personal-action hook that tends to outperform vaguer health stories once it reaches people it applies to.
The Angle: This is part of a bigger trend of at-home health testing replacing awkward doctor visits, and it's a genuine win — catching a cancer-causing virus early without ever leaving your couch.

- The NHS is sending free HPV self-testing kits to nearly 4 million women.
- The kits are designed to be used at home, no clinic visit required.
- They screen for HPV, the virus that can lead to cervical cancer, aiming to catch it before it develops.

The Debate Starter

- Would you actually trust yourself to do this test right at home, or does it feel like a job for a doctor?

■ Cheese Balls Shut Down Traffic on the 105

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Cheese balls spilled across a freeway is exactly the absurd, highly visual 'nottheonion' image that spreads fast on meme/screenshot reposts regardless of where it started.
The Angle: A truckload of cheese balls didn't make it to the store - it made it to the freeway, snarling traffic and giving commuters the ultimate snack-related delay excuse.

- Pallets of cheese balls spilled across the 105 Freeway in Lynwood, California
- The spill created a traffic mess for drivers in the area
- Story is currently making the rounds on r/nottheonion

The Phone-In Trigger

- What's the most ridiculous thing you've ever seen fall off a truck on the highway?

■ Someone's mystery-dropping bread loaves on a Japan mountain road

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): An unexplained mystery ('authorities baffled' by bread appearing on a mountain road) is a classic low-effort, high-curiosity hook that punches above its current upvotes.
The Angle: It's a real-life whodunit with zero stakes and maximum weird — a classic 'nottheonion' story that's basically a live Mad Lib for the hosts to guess at.

- Loaves of bread keep turning up on a mountain road in Tottori Prefecture, Japan
- Local authorities say they're stumped on who's doing it or why

The Theory Game

- Callers, phones are open: who's the mystery bread bandit and what's the motive?

■ Google says you're wrong now? AI's got everyone doubting the experts

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Taps directly into the live cultural anxiety about AI undermining expertise and trust, a debate topic that's actively trending well beyond r/technology.
The Angle: This one hits everybody who's ever Googled a symptom or argued with a mechanic - AI chatbots are so confident and available that people are trusting them over doctors, lawyers, and other actual professionals, and it's creating real friction in relationships and workplaces.

The Debate Starter

- Have you ever argued with a professional - your doctor, your accountant, your contractor - because ChatGPT told you something different?

■ A $400 walking robot toy just previewed our robot-filled future

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A named company (Hugging Face) plus a concrete price point ($400) makes the 'ubiquitous cheap robots' trend feel suddenly real and shareable rather than abstract futurism.
The Angle: This isn't just a toy story — it's a glimpse at robots going from sci-fi to Costco-shelf cheap, plugged into supercomputer-grade AI brains over the internet, with China already primed to mass-produce them the way it did EVs and solar.

- The bipedal robot toy from Hugging Face costs roughly $400
- It runs on a small local "toy brain" but can connect online to a full-scale AI supercomputer brain
- The pitch: this device times billions of similar units worldwide
- Comparison point: China has already gone from zero to dominant in electronics, EVs, and energy tech — robotics could be next

The Debate Starter

- Would you buy your kid a $400 robot that's secretly wired into a supercomputer — and does that thought thrill you or freak you out?
