TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (4 stories)

■ Trump flew in a catering truck to dodge Iranian assassination plot

The Angle: The Secret Service moved Trump between planes hidden in a food truck during a NATO trip last month—a dramatic security operation that only came to light this week. It's a rare public glimpse into how seriously U.S. intelligence treats credible threats against sitting presidents.

- Trump took a secret military flight from Turkey using a deception operation involving a catering truck to move between aircraft
- The operation was prompted by an Iranian assassination threat, according to Washington Post reporting
- The incident occurred during a NATO trip last month but wasn't publicly disclosed until this week

The Security Theater Question

- How often do you think the Secret Service is moving the President in ways the public never finds out about?

■ Trump's secret Turkey exit: White House covered up Iranian threat

The Angle: The White House publicly said Trump left a NATO summit on Air Force One—but he actually took a decoy flight over credible assassination threats. It's a rare peek at the real security operations presidents face that never make the official record.

- The White House publicly stated Trump departed on Air Force One from the NATO summit in Turkey
- Trump actually flew on an alternate military aircraft in a secret operation designed as an elaborate ruse
- An Iranian assassination threat prompted the extraordinary security measure last month
- The departure involved a coordinated deception to conceal the president's actual travel pattern

The Trust Question

- When a president's public schedule doesn't match reality for security reasons, how much should the public know—and when?

■■ Quebec's anti-King oath law headed to court showdown

The Angle: A constitutional battle is brewing over Quebec's 2022 decision to ditch the mandatory oath to the King—raising the question of whether provinces can unilaterally rewrite core constitutional rules, or if Ottawa has the final say.

- Quebec abolished the mandatory Oath of Allegiance to the King for members of the provincial National Assembly in 2022
- A lawyer is challenging the law, arguing the provincial government overstepped its constitutional powers
- The case will test whether provinces can unilaterally change constitutional obligations tied to the Crown

The Constitutional Flashpoint

- Should a province be able to kick out the King's oath on its own, or is that a federal-level decision? Where do you think the line is?

■■ Canada launches petition to remove U.S. ambassador

The Angle: Nearly 30,000 Canadians have signed a petition demanding the removal of U.S. Ambassador Pete Hoekstra, accusing him of stoking separatist sentiment in Alberta and damaging bilateral relations. It's a rare diplomatic friction point that's gone viral north of the border.

- A petition demanding Pete Hoekstra's removal has reached nearly 30,000 signatures
- The petition accuses Hoekstra of undermining Canada-U.S. relations
- He's alleged to have egged on Alberta separatists, fueling tensions over Canadian unity

The Diplomatic Wild Card

- Should a sitting U.S. ambassador be openly cheerleading the breakup of Canada—and does Ottawa actually have any leverage to make him go?

TRENDING TODAY

🛩■ Trump reveals secret mid-flight plane swap over safety threat

The Angle: The President confirmed he ditched his plane mid-journey because of a credible threat to his life—and the secrecy around it has people asking what we don't know and why it wasn't public knowledge sooner.

- Trump confirmed Tuesday he secretly switched planes due to what he described as a threat to his life
- The swap happened mid-journey, raising questions about timing, threat level, and why the public wasn't informed
- Details remain sparse on the nature of the threat, when exactly it occurred, and what security protocols triggered the switch

The Trust Question

- When a President swaps planes in secret over a credible threat—and tells us after the fact—should that be public knowledge immediately, or is operational security worth the information gap?

■■ Canada wants U.S. Ambassador out—petition hits 29K signatures

The Angle: A viral petition is demanding the Canadian government expel U.S. Ambassador Pete Hoekstra, escalating tensions between Ottawa and Washington at a politically charged moment. The push signals real friction between the two allies.

- Over 29,000 Canadians have signed a petition calling for U.S. Ambassador Pete Hoekstra to be declared persona non grata and expelled
- The petition is set to be presented to the House of Commons this fall
- The move reflects escalating diplomatic tension between Canada and the U.S. during a politically volatile period

The Hot Take

- Should Canada actually boot a sitting U.S. ambassador, or is this petition just venting—and what would the fallout really look like for both countries?

LIFESTYLE CHAT

■ Alessandra Ambrosio's engaged—and she's got the Instagram post to prove it

The Angle: The supermodel and former Victoria's Secret Angel just said yes to Buck Palmer after nearly two years of dating. It's the kind of low-drama celebrity milestone that has people genuinely rooting for her—she announced it the way everyone does now: on Instagram, naturally.

- Alessandra Ambrosio, the legendary Victoria's Secret Angel, got engaged to Buck Palmer
- The couple has been dating for nearly 2 years
- She shared the engagement news via Instagram on Tuesday
- Her caption: 'Here's to forever'

The Celeb Couple Check-In

■ Love Is Blind is coming to Canada — and yes, your friends are nominating you

The Angle: Netflix's hugely popular dating show is officially casting in Canada, and Canadians are already losing their minds tagging single friends on social media. It's one of those culture moments where reality TV crosses into actual participation for listeners.

- Netflix announced Tuesday that Love Is Blind is expanding to Canada
- The show is now open for Canadian casting
- Canadians are already tagging their single friends on social media in response

The Call-Out Moment

- Have you been tagged in a Love Is Blind post yet — and more importantly, would you actually do it?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Tagging Game - First segment beat -> Hosts ask: 'Who on this show would you nominate if you could tag them right now?' Quick lightning-round guesses about each other or famous Canadians.
- Step 2: The Honesty Check - Mid-segment pivot -> Flip it: would YOU actually apply if someone tagged you? What's the deal-breaker — the pods, the commitment, the cameras, or just the whole vibe?

- Step 3: Phone Lines Open - Audience engagement -> Listeners call in with their tagging stories — who did they nominate, what did their friend say, and is anyone actually applying?

■■ MyPillow guy's Minnesota governor run just got pillow-talked

The Angle: Mike Lindell's high-profile swing at Minnesota's GOP primary ended in a blowout loss, marking a rare electoral rejection for the Trump-aligned businessman who's been a fixture in right-wing politics. It's a reality check on celebrity-candidate star power in a crowded primary field.

- Demuth won the GOP primary by more than 15 percentage points, decisively beating Mike Lindell and Kendall Qualls
- Lindell, the MyPillow CEO, was running for Minnesota governor in a crowded Republican primary field
- The loss underscores the limits of celebrity name recognition and Trump-world proximity when voters are picking their actual state leader

The Reality Check

- Has the MyPillow guy finally met a race he can't hype his way through—or is this just what happens when you run in a primary where actual candidates have actual track records?

■ RFK Jr. attacks LA homeless agency over alleged billions in fraud

The Angle: Robert F. Kennedy Jr. is escalating his fight against what he calls a corruption-plagued homeless services system in Los Angeles, accusing the Biden-era HHS leadership of gutting oversight and letting tens of billions slip through the cracks. With federal funding now on the line, it's the kind of government-waste story that cuts across party lines and affects real taxpayer dollars.

- RFK Jr. accused former HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra of dismantling oversight mechanisms
- The federal government is threatening to cut off $240 million in funding to LA's homeless agency
- Kennedy claims the lack of oversight has led to massive fraud and tens of billions stolen from taxpayers

The Accountability Question

- Should cities lose federal funding if they can't prove their homeless programs aren't hemorrhaging money—or does that just punish the people who actually need help?
