TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (5 stories)

■ Renewable energy has finally grown fast enough to meet all new global electricity demand

The Angle: For the first time ever, clean energy alone covered ALL the growth in global electricity demand — and solar just leapfrogged coal worldwide. Even China and India, the usual fossil-fuel growth engines, saw coal power actually drop.

- For the first time ever, rising global electricity demand was fully covered by clean power, not fossil fuels
- China and India — historically the biggest drivers of fossil-fuel growth — both saw falls in fossil generation
- Solar overtook coal in the global electricity mix
- Renewables became the world's largest source of electricity for the first time in over a century

■ Sony says gamers don't own their digital purchases, but 44 examples of its own wording suggest otherwise

The Angle: Every gamer who's bought a digital title has wondered what happens when a platform pulls it - this one's got receipts, with Sony's own marketing language allegedly contradicting their legal position on ownership.

- Sony is arguing in a case that gamers don't actually own the digital games they buy.
- Critics dug up 44 examples of Sony's own wording - like "buy," "own," and "purchase" - used to sell those same digital titles.
- The contradiction is being called out as a showcase of the gap between marketing language and the fine print in digital licensing terms.

The Debate Starter

- If you've ever hit "buy now" on a digital game, movie, or album - do you actually think you own it, or did you already know you were just renting it?

■ Cops Search Thousands of Flock Cameras for Reasons of 'LMAO,' 'IDK,' 'Hehe,' and 'asdfg'

The Angle: Police departments nationwide use Flock's license-plate camera network, and logs show officers justifying thousands of searches with nonsense like "IDK" and "asdfg" instead of an actual case reason - a viral, kind of hilarious, kind of terrifying look at how little oversight this surveillance system actually has.

- Police reportedly ran thousands of searches through the Flock license-plate camera network
- Logged justifications for the searches included "LMAO," "IDK," "Hehe," and "asdfg"
- Story is blowing up on Reddit's r/technology as a flashpoint for surveillance-oversight concerns

The Debate Starter

- If a cop can search a nationwide camera network and just type 'lol' as the reason, is anyone actually watching the watchers?

■ Police Used Flock Camera Footage to Jail Innocent Woman for 13 Days: 'I Thought My Life Was Over'

The Angle: This is the surveillance-state nightmare people worry about actually happening — a network of license plate cameras used by police departments nationwide reportedly helped jail a woman who did nothing wrong. It's a real gut-check on how much we should trust AI-assisted policing.

- Police leaned on footage from Flock cameras — the license-plate-reading network used by thousands of departments across the country — to make the arrest.
- The woman spent 13 days behind bars before it came out she was innocent.
- Her own words: 'I thought my life was over.'

The Debate Starter

■ US coal 'biggest contributor by far' to rise in global emissions

The Angle: New data reportedly pins US coal as the single biggest driver behind the recent global spike in emissions — a real gut-check for a country that keeps talking green energy while coal plants stay online.

- Report reportedly names US coal as the "biggest contributor by far" to the recent rise in global emissions.
- Limited source detail available beyond the headline claim — worth a fact-check on air before diving deep.

The Debate Starter

■ EPA eliminates rule that limits planet-warming greenhouse gas emissions from power plants

The Angle: This is a major federal rollback on climate policy that touches every American's power bill, air quality, and the bigger fight over how the U.S. handles global warming - the kind of story that splits a room fast.

- The EPA has eliminated a federal rule capping greenhouse gas emissions from power plants.
- Power plants are among the largest sources of planet-warming pollution in the U.S.
- The move marks a major reversal in federal climate policy.

■■ "Offensively cheap": Solar power is looking up

The Angle: Solar power costs have reportedly dropped so low that the internet is calling it "offensively cheap" - a trend that touches everyone's power bill and could reshape how North America thinks about energy long-term.

- Reddit's r/futurology is buzzing over solar power getting dramatically, almost comically cheap
- The framing - "offensively cheap" - suggests costs have dropped further/faster than people expected
- Signals solar may be tipping from niche green option to straight-up cheapest energy play

■■ NDP upsets UCP stronghold in Calgary-Shaw in byelection results

The Angle: A byelection upset in a riding UCP has held onto for years is the kind of result that gets read as a bellwether for how Albertans are feeling about the provincial government right now.

- Calgary-Shaw flipped from UCP to NDP in the byelection
- The riding had been considered a UCP stronghold heading into the vote
- Byelection results like this are often read province-wide as a signal on the sitting government's popularity

The Debate Starter

■ 'Lanterns' Burns It All Down: Episode 5 Director Explains John Stewart's Shocking Decision - TheWrap

The Angle: Episode 5 of HBO's new 'Lanterns' series went full scorched-earth with John Stewart's storyline, and the director is now explaining why they blew it up with three episodes still to go — perfect fuel for a spoiler-warning superhero chat.

- Director Geeta Vasant Patel sat down with TheWrap to break down Episode 5's twist.
- The show reportedly "burned it all down" around John Stewart's arc mid-season.
- There are still three episodes left in the season after this gut-punch.
- Patel says the chaos was designed to keep the character, not the spectacle, front and center.

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN
- Step 1: Read the Headline Straight - Deadpan delivery -> Host reads the Uber CEO quote completely straight, no reaction, like it's normal business news.
- Step 2: Corporate-Speak Translator - 30-second bit -> Co-host "translates" the quote into plain English - what a layoff-as-customer-benefit line actually means.
- Step 3: Round Up More Examples - Crowdsource on air -> Ask listeners to text in the most tone-deaf corporate spin line they've ever heard from a CEO.

BREAKOUT WATCH (below the show's usual engagement bar - included on editorial judgment, not metrics; producer's call)

■ Christian Bale opens Palmdale village built to keep foster brothers and sisters together

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A recognizable A-list name (Christian Bale) doing something unexpectedly tender and specific — building a literal village to keep foster siblings together — is the kind of surprising-actor-does-good story that outperforms typical celebrity news.
The Angle: A-list actor turned real estate developer — Batman is building homes so foster siblings don't get split up, and that's the kind of feel-good celebrity story that actually has substance behind it.

- Christian Bale helped open a new foster care village in Palmdale, California
- The project is designed to keep foster brothers and sisters together, instead of splitting siblings up across different homes
- Sibling separation is one of the most common heartbreaks in the foster system — this village is built specifically to solve that

The Feel-Good Hook
- Did you know most foster kids with siblings get split into different homes — would you have guessed a Hollywood A-lister would be the one building a fix?

■ 'Smart' underwear that counts your farts

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Absurd novelty tech ('smart underwear that counts farts') is prime meme/screenshot bait for r/nottheonion-style spread — it's funny, easy to summarize in one line, and shareable without any context.
The Angle: It's the kind of gloriously dumb invention the internet was built to mock — a wearable that turns your gas into data, which is exactly the kind of pointless-but-hilarious story that makes a killer goodbye segment.

The Overshare Alert
- Would you actually wear underwear that snitches on your gas to an app?

■ Tech billionaire Peter Thiel bringing Antichrist lectures to Nashville

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Peter Thiel + 'Antichrist lectures' is a genuinely bizarre, specific pairing of a major tech name with fringe theological content — that kind of dissonance drives curiosity clicks and quote-tweet dunking alike.
The Angle: A Silicon Valley billionaire touring the country giving lectures on the literal Antichrist is exactly the kind of "wait, what?" story that gets shared - it's a strange collision of tech money, politics, and apocalyptic theology that people can't help but talk about.

The Wait, What? Moment

- Would you actually pay to sit through a tech billionaire's lecture on the Antichrist?

■ Ed Sheeran 'deserves no applause' after axing Macklemore from tour over Palestine drama

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): The Sheeran/Macklemore Palestine tour-drop story also appears independently via CTVNews (index 39), meaning it's already generating cross-platform pickup — a concrete momentum signal plus a built-in controversy hook.
The Angle: A pop superstar bouncing a fellow artist from his tour over a Palestine-related dust-up is exactly the kind of celebrity-meets-politics story that splits a room fast - is this about keeping a tour 'safe,' or silencing an artist for speaking out?

- Ed Sheeran reportedly axed Macklemore from an upcoming tour lineup.
- The fallout ties back to Macklemore's vocal stance on Palestine.
- Backlash online includes claims Sheeran 'deserves no applause' for the call.

The Debate Starter

- Should artists ever get bumped from a tour over their political statements, or is that flat-out censorship?

■ Fashion and costume designer Bob Mackie, who helped stars sparkle, dies age 87

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Bob Mackie's death is being covered independently by both r/entertainment and Billboard (index 49), and iconic-designer obituaries with decades of celebrity photos ('helped stars sparkle') tend to generate strong nostalgic tribute engagement.
The Angle: Bob Mackie spent decades defining what glamour looks like on stage and screen, so his passing is a genuine pop-culture moment worth pausing on, not just an industry footnote.

- Fashion and costume designer Bob Mackie has died at age 87
- He built his reputation dressing stars in show-stopping, sparkle-heavy looks for stage and screen

The Tribute Moment

- Ask listeners: what's the most iconic sparkly, over-the-top stage look you remember - odds are a Bob Mackie design is behind it.
