TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (3 stories)

■■ Famous climber Nirmal Purja missing after Pakistan avalanche

The Angle: Nirmal Purja, a world-renowned mountaineer known for record-breaking climbs, is among 10 climbers unaccounted for after an avalanche on Broad Peak in Pakistan. Rescue crews have recovered four bodies so far, but bad weather is making the search for the remaining six increasingly desperate.

- 10 climbers missing after avalanche on Broad Peak in Pakistan
- Rescue teams located 4 bodies on Friday; 6 still missing
- Nirmal Purja, famous for rapid-ascent climbing records, is among the missing
- Search efforts hampered by adverse weather conditions affecting helicopter operations

The World Watch

- How much risk do elite climbers knowingly accept to chase records on the world's most dangerous peaks?

■■ Trump's 15-Step Gaza Peace Roadmap Emerges After Hamas Deal

The Angle: A day after Trump announced Hamas agreed to disarm, his newly formed Board of Peace released a detailed implementation plan. This is a major geopolitical move with real stakes—whether it actually holds is the question everyone's watching.

- Trump's Board of Peace released a 15-step roadmap Friday to implement a Gaza ceasefire and end hostilities
- The plan came one day after Trump announced Hamas had agreed to lay down its weapons
- The board is Trump's newly constituted team tasked with overseeing the peace process in Gaza

The Credibility Test

- Do you buy that this plan actually gets implemented, or is this political theater that falls apart the second real pressure hits?

■ SpaceX rocket about to crash-land on the moon—live

The Angle: A SpaceX Starship upper stage is on a collision course with the moon next week, and unlike typical space failures, this one's actually useful: scientists are treating the impact as a real-time experiment to study lunar impacts and gather data that could matter for future moon bases and resource hunting.

- A SpaceX Starship upper stage will hit the moon unintentionally next week
- The impact may be visible from Earth with proper equipment
- Scientists see this as an opportunity to study lunar impact mechanics and potential threats to future lunar infrastructure
- The collision will provide critical research data for understanding how impacts affect the moon's surface

The Cosmic Pivot

- Is a space accident that turns into real science a win or a warning sign—and would you actually try to spot this thing if you had a telescope?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN
- Step 1: The Setup - First 30 seconds -> Host A explains what's happening (Starship headed for moon crash) and why it wasn't planned—let Host B react with the 'wait, that's a problem' energy.
- Step 2: The Plot Twist - Next 45 seconds -> Host A pivots: scientists actually want this data. Host B asks the obvious question: 'So we're just... okay with crashing stuff into the moon now?'
- Step 3: The Call-Out - Closing 30 seconds -> Throw to phones/socials: 'Do you have a telescope and are you actually going to try to see this? Call in or text—space nerds, this is your moment.'

LIFESTYLE CHAT

■ Scott Eastwood blasts co-star for walking off movie set mid-shoot

The Angle: Clint Eastwood's son just called out a fellow actor for abandoning a film production partway through—and launched into a broader rant about celebrities getting too big for their britches. It's the kind of industry beef that sparks the classic 'are you team professionalism or team creative freedom' debate.

- Scott Eastwood publicly criticized a co-star for quitting a movie mid-production, calling their behavior 'shocking' and a 'piece of s–t' move
- Eastwood blamed ego and fame, saying 'People get too famous for too long and think the world owes them something'
- The unnamed co-star apparently left the project without finishing their scenes

The Contract Breach Debate
- If you signed up to make a movie, do you have the right to walk away, or is bailing on a shoot always a betrayal of your cast and crew?

■ Metal band plays surprise hospital concert for longtime patient

The Angle: A Ottawa hospital became an unlikely rock venue when a heavy metal band performed live for a patient who'd been hoping to catch a show. It's the kind of feel-good moment that reminds us hospitals can be more than just sterile corridors—and it's getting people talking about creative ways to brighten someone's toughest days.

- A heavy metal band performed at Bruyère Health in Ottawa last week
- The concert was arranged to grant a longtime patient's wish to attend a hard rock show
- The performance took place inside the hospital itself, not a traditional venue

The Watercooler Moment
- Have you or someone you know had a hospital stay that needed brightening up—what would've made it better?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN
- Step 1: The Setup - Opening minute -> Hosts riff on the absurdity and beauty of a hospital hosting a metal concert—how did this even happen? Paint the scene.
- Step 2: The Patient's Story - Minute two -> Dig into who this person is, how long they've been at the hospital, and why a metal show mattered to them—make it personal.
- Step 3: Listener Call-In - Final segment -> Open phones: 'What's the most creative or unexpected thing someone did to brighten your day during a tough time?'

CLOSER: THE KICKER/GOODBYES (franchise fallback)

■ Richard Gere's son, Cindy Crawford's daughter team up on film

The Angle: Homer Gere and Kaia Gerber—kids of two '90s icons who dated briefly—are co-starring in a new movie together, and they're leaning hard into the weird full-circle moment. It's the kind of Hollywood coincidence that makes you go, wait, what?

- Richard Gere and Cindy Crawford were married from 1991 to 1995
- Their kids, Homer Gere and Kaia Gerber, are now working together on the film The Shards
- Homer told E! News at the NYC premiere that the pairing was 'really funny' given their parents' history

The Small-World Moment

- Have you ever run into someone because of your parents' old connection—and had that awkward-but-funny vibe with them?

■ FIFA's private money play divides the soccer world

The Angle: Just days after the World Cup wrapped, FIFA president Gianni Infantino dropped a bombshell investment plan that's got major soccer nations, players, and leagues in open revolt. It's the biggest power fight in the sport right now.

- FIFA president Gianni Infantino announced a private-investment proposal less than two weeks after the 2026 World Cup concluded
- The plan has triggered significant backlash from major soccer stakeholders across multiple nations
- The proposal represents a major shift in how soccer's governing body plans to fund and control the sport globally

The Backlash Angle

- Should FIFA be allowed to hand over control of world soccer to private investors, or is this a power grab that'll wreck the sport's independence?

■■ Hamas sets conditions for Gaza peace deal weapons handover

The Angle: Trump's newly announced Gaza ceasefire is hitting its first real test—Hamas is saying they'll only disarm if Israel pulls out completely and stops attacks first. This is the kind of conditional commitment that could make or break whether any peace actually sticks.

- Hamas told Reuters that implementing Trump's announced Gaza peace deal depends on Israel meeting its commitments first
- The core condition: Hamas will hand over weapons only if Israel withdraws forces and ends attacks
- This comes after an agreement reached last year, suggesting prior negotiations are now being invoked as a framework

The Trust Question

- So who goes first here—does Israel withdraw and hope Hamas actually disarms, or does Hamas hand over weapons first and trust Israel won't restart attacks?

■ New bridge opens, but trucks still clogging the old route

The Angle: The Gordie Howe bridge just launched, but drivers aren't switching over yet—and that's creating a real logistics puzzle on both sides of the border. It raises a bigger question: why do major infrastructure projects sometimes flop at launch?

- Gordie Howe International Bridge officially opened to traffic Monday
- Trucks continue to crowd Huron Church Road despite the new crossing
- Industry leaders say it will take time before traffic patterns shift to the new bridge

The Efficiency Question

- When you build a shiny new $5 billion bridge, shouldn't everyone just... use it? Why are truck drivers still sitting in the old bottleneck?

■ Your cozy fireplace might be quietly poisoning your home

The Angle: Wood-burning stoves and fireplaces are a beloved winter ritual for millions, but new research shows they're pumping dangerous pollution directly into your living room—and most people have no idea. If you've got a fireplace, this hits different.

- Wood-burning is a major source of harmful pollution in many communities, according to environmental research
- There is a critical lack of awareness about the health risks among homeowners who use fireplaces or wood stoves
- Pollution from burning wood can accumulate indoors and affect air quality in your home year-round

The Wake-Up Call

- How many of you light up that fireplace without thinking twice—and now you're wondering if it's actually safe?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Quick Poll - First 90 seconds -> Ask listeners: Do you use a fireplace or wood stove? Text/call in—we're betting most people have zero clue about the pollution risk.
- Step 2: The Myth-Bust - 2-3 minutes -> Host unpacks why 'it's natural so it's fine' is dead wrong—wood smoke contains particulate matter and toxins that linger indoors.
- Step 3: Real Talk - Final 2 minutes -> Hosts share: Do you still use yours? Are you ditching it? Invite listeners to share their fireplace confessions and what they're doing about it.
