The Angle: Two years later and the Prince of Wales is still clowning Travis Kelce about that viral Eras Tour selfie with Taylor Swift — a future king throwing playful shade at an NFL star is exactly the kind of crossover moment that gets people talking.

- Prince William, 44, surprised everyone popping up on 'The Graham Norton Show' and brought this story right back up.
- He took his two eldest kids to Taylor Swift's Eras Tour show in London in 2024.
- William admits he 'tried to move' Travis Kelce out of frame during his selfie with Swift.
- The jab comes two years after that selfie moment first went viral.

The Debate Starter

The Angle: A Trump-backed candidate just lost in Brazil while most of Latin America is sliding right - that's a genuine political surprise with ripple effects for US foreign policy chatter.

- Lula held off a comeback bid from Bolsonaro, who had Trump's backing
- The result keeps Brazil - Latin America's biggest economy - in left-leaning hands
- It bucks the regional trend: most of Latin America has been swinging right lately
- Brazil and the US have had a rocky relationship under the current political alignment, making this result a talking point for US-Brazil relations

The Debate Starter

- Does a US-backed candidate losing abroad say more about Trump's influence shrinking or about local politics just not translating overseas?

■■ California is testing a foldable solar canopy stretching 131 feet over an irrigation canal 21 feet wide. It generates clean power and shades water to potentially reduce evaporation and weed growth; it is designed to fold back on rails so crews can clear the channel with an anchor chain.

The Angle: It's a wild two-for-one fix: clean power AND water conservation, folding over canals on rails like a pop-up umbrella for a river. Feels like sci-fi but it's an actual pilot project right now.

- The solar canopy stretches 131 feet long over a canal that's only 21 feet wide.
- It generates clean electricity while shading the water underneath.
- The shade is designed to cut down on evaporation and weed growth in the canal.
- It folds back on rails so crews can still clear the channel using an anchor chain.

The Debate Starter

- Genius infrastructure fix or expensive science project — would you want to see these over canals near you?

■ Cybersecurity bounty hunter says Samsung TVs use AI to record audio and screenshots for ads — 'Finally found a company that truly listens to its customers,' says hacker

The Angle: A cybersecurity researcher claims Samsung smart TVs are quietly using AI to capture audio and screenshots of what you're watching to feed targeted ads — the kind of 'your TV is spying on you' story that makes everyone go check their own living room.

- A self-described cybersecurity bounty hunter says Samsung TVs use AI to record audio and screenshots for advertising purposes.
- The claim is circulating from Reddit's r/technology community, sparking fresh smart-TV privacy alarm.
- The hacker's sarcastic jab: 'Finally found a company that truly listens to its customers.'

■ LG Smart TVs Caught Mapping Your Network, Logging Audio With Screen Off

The Angle: Smart TV privacy fears just got a new poster child, and this one's a top-selling brand millions of North Americans already have bolted to their living room wall.

- LG smart TVs are reportedly mapping out your home network without you knowing.
- Even with the screen off, the TVs are allegedly still logging audio in the background.
- The claim is blowing up on Reddit's r/technology, reviving the whole 'is my TV listening to me' panic.

■ How tech billionaires are buying the narrative: Elon Musk's $1B Paramount deal has suffocated an independent documentary critical of him

The Angle: This taps into a bigger fear a lot of people already have - that billionaires aren't just making headlines anymore, they're buying the companies that decide which stories get told. A reported $1B Musk-Paramount deal allegedly burying a critical doc about him is the kind of story that makes people ask 'wait, can they actually do that?'

- Reports point to a $1 billion deal between Elon Musk and Paramount.
- An independent documentary critical of Musk reportedly got shelved or suffocated in the fallout.
- The story is being framed as part of a wider trend: tech billionaires allegedly influencing or controlling media narratives about themselves.

The Debate Starter

- If you had $1B and a grudge against a bad documentary, would you make it disappear - or is that exactly the problem?

■ AI use leads UC Berkeley math professor to see ‘no point’ in grading homework

The Angle: This is the AI-in-school panic hitting a breaking point - a math professor says ChatGPT has made homework so easy to fake that grading it is basically pointless, which is a gut-check for every parent, student, and teacher wondering if AI just broke the whole homework system.

- A UC Berkeley math professor says AI use among students has gotten so widespread there's 'no point' in grading homework anymore.
- The story is circulating out of r/futurology, framed as another sign AI is upending how colleges assess student work.

The Debate Starter

■ Donald Trump Says Nicki Minaj Has a 'Beautiful A' At Rally

The Angle: A sitting president riffing on a pop star's body mid-rally is the kind of political-meets-pop-culture collision that's built for a viral clip and an easy debate on air.

- Donald Trump made the comment about Nicki Minaj during remarks at a campaign rally.
- The line is already spreading as a clip across social media and entertainment outlets.
- It's the latest example of a political rally moment crossing over into pop culture chatter.

■■ Lula da Silva has won Brazil's presidential election over Flávio Bolsonaro in the second round

The Angle: Brazil just picked its next president in a nail-biter runoff, and it's a storyline North American listeners already know — Lula vs. a Bolsonaro, round two. Big geopolitical ripple for one of the world's largest economies.

- Lula da Silva has won Brazil's presidential election in the second round.
- He defeated Flávio Bolsonaro to claim the win.
- The race went all the way to a runoff vote, signaling a tight, divided electorate.

■ People are using AI to 'dumb down' their smart TVs. Is that a good idea?

The Angle: Everyone's annoyed by bloated, ad-stuffed smart TVs, so a viral trick promising an AI fix is catching fire online — but there's a real 'is this a terrible idea' debate baked right in.

- Viral posts are showing people how to use AI tools to hack their smart TVs
- The goal: strip out unnecessary pre-installed apps and clunky bloatware
- Some users are also using it to disable certain tracking features
- Critics warn there are easier, safer ways to declutter a TV without an AI hack

The Debate Starter

The Angle: A total stranger out-joked Conan O'Brien on camera and the internet can't stop watching - it's the kind of pure, random viral moment that makes for an easy, feel-good chat segment.

- Debbie Shields, a 68-year-old Brooklyn bar owner, had never met Conan O'Brien before this encounter.
- The exchange happened during a 'Subway Takes' interview - the viral series where strangers get grilled with hot takes on the subway.
- Shields reportedly held her own and out-joked Conan, which is what sent the clip viral.
- She's since become an accidental internet sensation off the back of the clip.

■ BYU's Sitake disputes roughing the kicker call in 2OT, but UCF 'bested us' - ESPN

The Angle: BYU was riding high at No. 2 in the country after upsetting Notre Dame, and a week later they're out, done in by a controversial penalty in double overtime against UCF - that's the kind of gut-punch college football story that gets debated all week.

- BYU lost to UCF 39-31 in double overtime on Saturday night
- Coach Kalani Sitake openly disagreed with a roughing the kicker penalty that set up UCF's game-winning score
- The loss comes just a week after BYU's emotional win over Notre Dame had vaulted them to No. 2 in the country
- Despite the heartbreaker, Sitake refused to call it a letdown game, saying UCF simply "bested us"

The Debate Starter

■■ Angry voters lean toward tough, dominant-looking leaders, while fearful voters prefer trustworthy-looking faces, a new 2026 American study finds. The effect was small (about 3 points) but worked the same way for Democrats and Republicans, though Republicans liked dominant faces more overall.

The Angle: New research says your gut reaction to a leader's FACE depends on your mood - fear makes you crave trustworthy, anger makes you crave dominant. It's a fun personality-test hook buried inside a political science study, and it cuts across party lines.

- A new 2026 American study finds angry voters gravitate toward tough, dominant-looking leaders
- Fearful voters lean the opposite way, preferring faces that read as trustworthy
- The effect is small - about 3 points - but it showed up the same way for Democrats and Republicans
- Republicans liked dominant-looking faces more overall, regardless of mood

The Debate Starter

- Call in: when you're furious vs. when you're scared, do you actually picture a different kind of leader in your head?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Set the Mood - 30 seconds -> Hosts each describe a recent moment they were genuinely angry, then a moment they were genuinely scared.

CLOSER: THE KICKER/GOODBYES

■ A kangaroo was found 3km out to sea off South Australia. Port Lincoln fishermen brought the exhausted animal aboard, cradled it on the trip back, and watched it rest on the beach before hopping away.

The Angle: This is the purest kind of goodbye-segment story - a stranded animal, a group of strangers who stop what they're doing to save it, and a happy ending with a hop into the sunset. Pure dopamine before the break.

- Fishermen off Port Lincoln, South Australia spotted a kangaroo swimming 3km (about 2 miles) out to sea.
- The animal was exhausted by the time they reached it and pulled it aboard the boat.
- Crew cradled the kangaroo for the ride back to shore.
- Once on the beach, it rested, got its strength back, and hopped away on its own.

■ Nathan Fielder Negotiated a ‘Kill Switch’ on ‘You Can See Everything,’ Says Lance Oppenheim: ‘If We Didn’t Find Something, We Could Just Throw It All Away’

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Nathan Fielder has an unusually vocal, meme-prone online fanbase, and a specific 'we could throw it all away' quote about a show's existential risk is the kind of quotable nugget that spreads on its own.
The Angle: Nathan Fielder's comedy is all about committing to the bit no matter how weird it gets, so hearing he built in an actual exit ramp for 'You Can See Everything' is a fun peek behind the curtain for fans who assume everything he does is fully planned.

- Director Lance Oppenheim reveals Nathan Fielder negotiated a "kill switch" on the project "You Can See Everything."
- The quote: "If we didn't find something, we could just throw it all away."
