TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (5 stories)

■■ US solar can now generate enough clean electricity to power more than 50 million homes, over one third of all households. The country added 11.4 GW of solar in Q2 2026, up 45% from a year earlier, while solar and battery storage made up 70% of all new power capacity in the first half.

The Angle: Clean energy just hit a real tipping point, not just a feel-good stat, and it's a story every listener can connect to their own power bill and the bigger fight over how America keeps the lights on.

- US solar can now generate enough electricity to power more than 50 million homes - over one third of all US households.
- The country added 11.4 GW of solar in Q2 2026, up 45% from a year earlier.
- Solar and battery storage together made up 70% of all new power capacity added in the first half of 2026.

The Debate Starter

- Solar's growing faster than almost anyone predicted - does that change how you feel about going solar at your own house, or are you still skeptical on cost and reliability?

■ People hate Flock so much its employees are now demoralized and thinking of quitting

The Angle: Flock Safety's surveillance cameras and license-plate readers have become a national flashpoint over privacy and policing, and now the blowback is reportedly hitting morale inside the company itself - a real 'when the controversy comes home' story.

- Flock Safety employees are reportedly demoralized amid mounting public backlash against the company
- Some staffers are said to be considering quitting because of how intense the criticism has gotten
- The claim is circulating via a widely discussed thread on Reddit's r/technology

The Debate Starter

- If the public hates what your company builds, is quitting the responsible move or just passing the buck?

■ Microsoft patents system to freeze games and inject ads during downtimes — watching commercials earns ad-free playtime credits

The Angle: Microsoft just patented a system that pauses gameplay to force ads on you mid-session — and gamers are already furious about paying full price for a game that might interrupt itself to sell you something.

- Microsoft filed a patent for a system that freezes gameplay during "downtimes" to slot in ads.
- Watch the ad, and you bank ad-free playtime credits to redeem later — basically buying peace and quiet.
- It's a patent filing, not a confirmed feature — nothing's shipped yet, but the backlash is already loud online.

The Debate Starter

- You already paid for the game — should Microsoft still get to pause it and sell you a car insurance ad?

■ Hideo Kojima Says Sony Canceled Physint Over A Zoom Call And Claims He Still Doesn't Know The Reason Why

The Angle: Legendary game designer Hideo Kojima is going public with how brutal the end of his Sony partnership really was - and the mystery is what's hooking people: even he says he doesn't know why it happened.

- Hideo Kojima says Sony canceled his project "Physint"
- He claims the cancellation news came via a Zoom call
- Kojima says he still doesn't know the reason why it was scrapped

The Debate Starter

- A Zoom call to kill a multi-year passion project - is that just modern business, or ice cold for a legend like Kojima?

■ Microsoft patent describes in-game advertising triggered by boss fights, loading screens, and cutscenes

The Angle: Microsoft's floated a patent for shoving ads into loading screens, cutscenes, and mid-boss-fight moments in games - exactly the kind of "we already paid for this" outrage that gets gamers and non-gamers alike fired up about where advertising doesn't belong.

- The patent reportedly comes from Microsoft, spotted circulating on r/technology
- It describes triggering ads during specific in-game moments: boss fights, loading screens, and cutscenes
- It's a patent filing, not a confirmed feature - but patents like this usually signal where a company's thinking is headed

The Debate Starter

- You already paid $70 for the game - where's the one moment an ad pop-up would make you throw the controller?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Set It Up - 30 seconds -> Hosts explain the patent: Microsoft eyeing ads that hit during boss fights, loading screens, cutscenes.
- Step 2: Phone Line Callout - 2-3 minutes -> Ask listeners to call/text the single worst in-game moment an ad could interrupt - funniest or most infuriating answer wins bragging rights.
- Step 3: Host Ranking - 1 minute -> Hosts rank the top 3 listener answers live and argue over which is truly the most unforgivable.

■ Engineered Probiotic Wipes Out 43% of Colorectal Tumors in Mice: The engineered E Coli packed a triple-whammy – chemotherapy produced directly inside the tumor, an immune stimulant, and a localized form of immune checkpoint blockade.

The Angle: It sounds like sci-fi, but researchers engineered a probiotic bacteria to hunt down colon tumors and hit them with a three-pronged attack - and it wiped out nearly half the tumors in mice. Early-stage, but it's the kind of wild science headline that gets people talking about the future of cancer treatment.

- Engineered E. coli wiped out 43% of colorectal tumors in mice
- The bacteria delivers a triple-whammy: chemo made directly inside the tumor, an immune stimulant, and localized immune checkpoint blockade
- The chemotherapy is produced right at the tumor site - not pumped through the whole body like traditional chemo
- Still in the mouse trial stage, but seen as a major proof-of-concept for 'living drug' cancer therapies

■ AI ‘Actress’ Tilly Norwood Glitches and Abruptly Starts Speaking Cantonese During Piers Morgan Interview

The Angle: Tilly Norwood, the AI-generated 'actress' that's already got Hollywood in an uproar, reportedly glitched mid-interview with Piers Morgan and switched languages out of nowhere — proof the whole AI-actor experiment might not be ready for live TV.

- Tilly Norwood is the AI-generated "actress" that's been stirring controversy in Hollywood.
- She sat down for an interview with Piers Morgan.
- Mid-interview, she reportedly glitched and started speaking Cantonese out of nowhere.

The Debate Starter

- If an AI 'actress' can't even make it through one live interview without glitching, should Hollywood really be worried about her taking real actors' jobs?

BREAKOUT WATCH (below the show's usual engagement bar - included on editorial judgment, not metrics; producer's call)

■■ Lawsuit says Anthropic, OpenAI, SpaceXAI and Google made illegal agreement on AI slowdown

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Naming Anthropic, OpenAI, SpaceXAI and Google in a single antitrust collusion lawsuit is a big-name, novel legal angle that rides the growing 'AI industry cartel' narrative trending in tech regulation coverage.
The Angle: A new lawsuit claims Anthropic, OpenAI, xAI, and Google secretly agreed to throttle AI development — a huge story if true, since these are the companies racing to build the tech reshaping everyday life.

- Lawsuit names Anthropic, OpenAI, SpaceXAI (xAI), and Google as defendants
- Core claim: the companies made an illegal agreement to slow down AI progress
- Details are still thin — this is breaking off a headline, more specifics expected to surface

The Debate Starter

- If the biggest AI companies really agreed to hit the brakes together, is that a scandal — or exactly what we should want them doing?

■ Explosive 'NAZA' Documentary, Attacked By Israeli Government, To Be Released In U.S. Theaters

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A documentary 'attacked by the Israeli government' getting a US theatrical release despite that pressure is a suppression narrative with built-in controversy that tends to generate outsized attention regardless of starting upvotes.
The Angle: A documentary just controversial enough to get slammed by the Israeli government is still landing in American theaters, which instantly turns it into a free-speech-versus-politics flashpoint — exactly the kind of story that gets people picking sides before they've even seen the film.

- A documentary referred to as 'NAZA' is reportedly being attacked by the Israeli government.
- Despite that pushback, the film is still set for a U.S. theatrical release.
- Specific details on the filmmakers, subject matter, and release date aren't confirmed yet — worth digging into before air.

The Debate Starter

- When a government attacks a film and it gets released anyway, does that make you more curious to see it — or more skeptical of it?

■ TW:SA. Mama Stanley makes appearance at pre-game Edmonton Oilers protest over the singing of Hockey Canada accused player Alex Formenton. Her petition calling for the singing to be reversed has garnered over 69k signatures!

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): An active petition plus an in-person stadium protest tied to the ongoing Hockey Canada assault case shows real-world momentum already building, which text-only stories rarely have.
The Angle: A grassroots petition just crossed 69,000 signatures and turned into a real protest outside an NHL preseason game - that's a fanbase openly clashing with front office over a Hockey Canada-linked signing, which is exactly the kind of story that splits a room.

- About 100 people protested outside Saturday's Oilers preseason game over the signing of Alex Formenton
- The petition, started by longtime fan Mary Loewen (aka "Mama Stanley"), has topped 69,000 signatures
- Loewen, a survivor of sexual assault herself, said other survivors have messaged her, sharing stories they'd never told anyone before
- Her message to the crowd: "Before anything else, I am a survivor... we are standing here peacefully today because survivors have spoken."

The Debate Starter

- Should a petition and a protest be enough to make a pro team reverse a signing?

■ Is everyone Bricking their phones without you? The anti-FOMO (and anti-doomscroll) wellness craze https://t.co/3jMCT4i8d3 https://t.co/DhhwQ

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): The 'Brick' anti-smartphone device taps directly into the accelerating digital-detox/dumbphone trend that's been gaining cultural steam, giving it a specific, on-trend hook beyond generic wellness content.
The Angle: It's the opposite of doomscrolling: people are voluntarily locking their phones down to kill FOMO and screen-time guilt, and it's becoming a whole wellness trend worth unpacking on air.

- The trend is called "Bricking" your phone — basically making your smartphone temporarily act like a dumbphone.
- It's being framed as an anti-FOMO, anti-doomscroll wellness move, not just a digital detox gimmick.
- @NYPost is flagging it as a growing lifestyle craze right now.

The Confession Booth

- Be honest — could you survive a week with your phone 'bricked,' or are you checking it before you even finish reading this?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Brick Test - 60 seconds, cold open -> Both hosts hand their phones to the other host / producer for the rest of the segment and talk about how it feels not having it in reach.
- Step 2: Confess Your Screen Time - 2 minutes, mid-segment -> Hosts pull up their actual daily screen-time number live and react to each other's before opening phone lines for listeners to share theirs.
- Step 3: Would You Actually Brick It? - Wrap-up -> Quick gut-check poll: hosts and callers vote yes/no on whether they'd try bricking their phone for a full day.
