TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (4 stories)

■■ Times fights Trump subpoenas over Air Force One reporting

The Angle: The New York Times is heading to court to block Trump administration subpoenas demanding details about its Air Force One coverage—a direct showdown over press freedom and source protection that will test how far a second Trump term will push back against media scrutiny.

- The New York Times received subpoenas last week from the Trump administration related to its reporting on Air Force One
- The Times is filing to quash the subpoenas in court, arguing they threaten journalists' rights to report freely
- The case centers on whether the administration can compel the newspaper to reveal sources, methods, and editorial decisions

The Press Freedom Flashpoint

- Does the Trump administration have the right to demand the Times' sources on that Air Force One story—or is that the kind of move that kills investigative journalism?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Setup - 30 seconds -> One host explains the subpoena demand and the Times' court filing; the other asks: what was the original Air Force One story the Times broke that triggered this?
- Step 2: The Split - 90 seconds -> Host A argues the administration has a right to know who leaked classified Air Force details; Host B counters that forcing source disclosure kills accountability journalism—run both sides hard
- Step 3: The Call - open phones, 5 minutes -> Ask: Should a president be able to subpoena a major newspaper for its sources? Listeners weigh in on press freedom vs. government security

■ Messi leads Argentina past England into World Cup final

The Angle: Argentina's defending champion status is still alive after a dramatic late-game comeback against England in the semis. This sets up a massive final against Spain on Sunday that could cement Messi's legacy.

- Argentina defeated England 2-1 in a World Cup semifinal on Wednesday in Atlanta
- Messi was pivotal in the rally, helping Argentina come from behind
- Argentina will face Spain in the World Cup final on Sunday
- Argentina is the defending champion entering this tournament

The Setup Question

- Do you think Messi finally gets his World Cup redemption story against Spain, or is this the year his luck runs out?

■ Megan Rapinoe says trans advocacy cost her a brand deal

The Angle: The US soccer icon claims an AI screening tool flagged her as a "risk" due to her vocal trans rights work—raising questions about how corporations quietly filter out activists and what happens when advocacy meets the bottom line.

- Megan Rapinoe revealed in a Marie Claire article that her trans rights advocacy cost her a brand partnership
- Rapinoe alleges an AI program flagged her as a potential "risk" to a brand
- The soccer legend has been one of the most visible US athletes speaking out on LGBTQ+ and trans rights issues

The Principle Question

- Should companies be allowed to use AI to quietly screen out athletes for their activism—and where's the line between brand safety and blacklisting?

www.cbc.ca (Tier 2) | Score: 74/90 (45 fit + 8 source + 21 quality) -> LEAD

■ Argentina stuns England, books World Cup final spot

The Angle: This is the biggest sports story of the year—Argentina just pulled off a dramatic upset to reach the World Cup final and will face Spain on Sunday. Massive moment for the tournament, massive moment for Argentina's Lionel Messi, and it's happening at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey, so it's practically on the continent.

- Argentina defeated England in a World Cup knockout match to advance to the final
- Argentina will face Spain in the championship match
- The final is set for Sunday at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey

The Watercooler Moment

- Are you team Argentina-Messi redemption arc, or did England's loss shock you?

■ Andy Serkis Defends All-White Cast for New Lord of the Rings Film

The Angle: The director of the upcoming "Hunt for Gollum" is pushing back on diversity criticism, saying the film won't do "politically correct casting for the sake of casting." It's reigniting the old debate about representation in fantasy casting—and whether Tolkien's world has a diversity problem or not.

- Andy Serkis directed the comments in a BBC interview about his in-production film "The Hunt for Gollum"
- The announced cast so far includes Jamie Dornan and Anna Taylor-Joy, described as entirely white actors
- Serkis said the film will "somewhat acknowledge" the franchise's historical lack of diversity
- He stated he won't be doing a "politically correct casting-for-the-sake-of-casting version" of the film

The Casting Debate

- Should fantasy films prioritize staying true to source material or push harder for diverse casting—and who gets to decide?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Serkis Quote Read - Set it up -> Host reads the full "politically correct casting" quote cold, lets it sit for a beat, then asks co-host: What's your gut?
- Step 2: The Two-Sides Rapid-Fire - Quick takes -> Host A takes the "stay faithful to Tolkien's text" argument; Host B takes the "fantasy worlds can be anything, cast who's best" counterpoint. 30 seconds each, no prep.
- Step 3: Phones: What Would You Cast? - Open the lines -> Ask listeners: If you were making a new Lord of the Rings, would you change the casting? Call in with your take.

■ 4.5 Million Canadians Can't Get to a Specialist

The Angle: StatsCan just dropped a major report showing nearly one in five middle-aged and older Canadians are struggling to see specialists—and it's a ticking time bomb as the population ages. This hits right at the heart of the healthcare crisis conversation happening right now.

- 4.5 million Canadians middle-aged and older report trouble accessing specialist care
- The problem is expected to worsen as Canada's population ages
- This is a new StatsCan national report measuring healthcare access across the country

The Personal Checkup

- Have you or someone you know hit this wall trying to see a specialist—how long did you wait, and what did you end up doing?

■ First Nations chief's 13-hour ER wait sparks health care outcry

The Angle: A Manitoba chief waited 13 hours in pain at a Winnipeg hospital, and now Indigenous leaders are demanding answers about systemic gaps in care for First Nations people. It's reigniting a conversation about who gets prioritized in our health system.

- Chief of Little Grand Rapids waited approximately 13 hours at a Winnipeg hospital while in pain
- First Nations leaders are now raising formal concerns about the quality of care Indigenous people receive in Manitoba
- The incident has sparked calls for better health care access and treatment standards for Indigenous communities

The Equity Question

- Have you or someone you know experienced different treatment in our health system—and do you think it comes down to who you are?

■ Parasite outbreak linked to lettuce and salad greens

The Angle: Health officials across the US are investigating a stomach parasite outbreak causing severe diarrhea, with Michigan and New York hit hardest—and they're pointing fingers at common grocery-store salad greens. If you've been sick lately, this could be why.

- Michigan and New York have the most confirmed cases of cyclosporiasis
- Lettuce and salad greens identified as possible source of the parasite outbreak
- The parasite is causing severe diarrhea and widespread illness across multiple states
- Michigan's Department of Health and Human Services is leading the investigation

The Food Safety Question

- Are you ditching the salad bar until this clears up, or are you already past it?

CLOSER: THE KICKER/GOODBYES

■ Heartstopper wraps with a feel-good final bow in London

The Angle: The beloved Netflix series closed out its run at a wholesome world premiere that perfectly captured why this show became a cultural moment for Gen Z. Stars Kit Connor and Joe Locke celebrated the franchise finale with fans in a vibe that was all about authenticity and inclusivity.

- World premiere held at Leicester Square's Cineworld in London on Tuesday night
- Netflix's dress code guidance: "Your best self — however that looks to you" — capturing the show's inclusive ethos
- Post-screening Q&A with cast, including leads Kit Connor and Joe Locke
- Described as an "incredibly wholesome" celebration of the franchise's closing

The Vibe Check

- What was the last show you genuinely felt sad to say goodbye to — and did the finale do it justice?

■ Scott Bryce, Daytime TV Fixture, Dead at 68

The Angle: The actor brought memorable roles to some of TV's biggest ensemble casts—from 'As the World Turns' to 'Murphy Brown.' His passing marks another loss for the generation that defined daytime and '90s network television.

- Scott Bryce died at age 68
- Son of 'Guiding Light' star Ed Bryce
- Played husband opposite Nancy McKeon on 'The Facts of Life' and Faith Ford on 'Murphy Brown'
- Also known for role on 'As the World Turns' and the teen drama 'Popular'

■ Chinese EV makers are rolling into Canada—here's why it matters

The Angle: China's biggest automakers are officially launching in Quebec, which means North American shoppers are about to have way cheaper electric vehicle options—and Detroit is already sweating. This is the beginning of a trade war many predicted.

- Dongfeng, one of China's major automakers, just unveiled its EV lineup at Montreal's Old Port
- Chinese EV manufacturers are targeting the Canadian market as their North American entry point, starting with Quebec
- This move comes as Chinese EVs have undercut Western automakers on price while gaining massive market share in Asia and Europe

The Market Shift

- Would you actually buy a Chinese EV if it cost half the price of a Tesla or a Ford—and how worried should Detroit be about this?

■ Times fights feds over Air Force One reporter subpoenas

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): NYT subpoena motion is a genuine press freedom story with institutional weight that tends to cascade once legal/journalism communities pick it up.
The Angle: The New York Times is pushing back against the government demanding its journalists reveal sources and notes about Air Force One coverage—a classic press-freedom clash that tests how much power the feds have to compel reporters to talk.

- The New York Times filed a motion to quash subpoenas served on its journalists
- The subpoenas are related to Air Force One coverage
- The case centers on the government's ability to compel reporters to disclose sources and unpublished reporting

The Free Press Question

- Should the government be able to force reporters to reveal their sources, or is that a press-freedom line that can't be crossed?

■ SpaceX's Starship takes another shot at history tomorrow

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Starship Flight 13 is a hard news peg with exact launch timing that creates a natural window for momentum surge as launch approaches.
The Angle: After a dramatic first launch last month, SpaceX is firing up the world's most powerful rocket again—and it's a huge moment for commercial space ambitions. This isn't just nerdy tech stuff; this is how we get back to the Moon and eventually Mars.

- Starship Flight 13 is the second full launch attempt of SpaceX's fully integrated rocket system
- The first attempt resulted in a dramatic in-flight explosion, but SpaceX has made improvements for this try
- This is considered a critical milestone in Elon Musk's long-term goal of making rockets reusable and affordable for deep-space missions

The Curiosity Hook

- Are you watching tomorrow, or is space stuff just background noise to you at this point?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Confession - Quick opener, 30 seconds -> Hosts admit what they actually know (or don't) about Starship and why it matters—no BS, just honest takes

- Step 2: The Live Watch - If timing works, tune in during the segment -> Pull up the launch feed on air and react live to whatever happens—success, delay, or explosion makes for real radio
- Step 3: The Text Question - Audience engagement, 1 minute -> Ask listeners: 'What's one space mission or moment that actually blew your mind?' See what people care about beyond the headlines

■■ R. Kelly formally asks Trump to cut his 30-year sentence

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): R. Kelly clemency request to Trump is a collision of high-profile names, criminal justice recency, and political favor-trading that has reliable outrage/debate fuel regardless of current engagement.
The Angle: The disgraced R&B singer convicted on racketeering and sex trafficking charges has officially filed for commutation—not a full pardon—with the incoming administration. It's a significant move that raises questions about who Trump might show clemency to and how much weight he'll give to high-profile criminal cases.

- R. Kelly filed a formal request for commutation (not a full pardon) of his 30-year sentence with Donald Trump, according to court records
- The commutation request is currently listed as pending
- This comes over a year after his attorney filed an emergency motion on similar grounds

The Clemency Question

- Should Trump consider commuting sentences for high-profile convictions like this, or should commutations be reserved for cases where there's genuine doubt about guilt—where do you draw the line?
