TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (4 stories)

■ Chicken thighs just got way more expensive—here's why

The Angle: Grocery prices keep hitting us in unexpected places. Chicken thighs spiked 8.2% in a single month—bigger jump than beef or coffee—and it's a signal that food inflation is spreading beyond the usual suspects.

- Chicken thigh prices jumped 8.2 per cent from May to June alone
- That surge outpaced increases for beef and coffee, typically the headline inflation drivers
- Data comes from official inflation numbers tracking month-to-month grocery shifts

The Wallet Check

- Are you seeing this at your grocery store—paying more for chicken thighs than you expected?

■ Ontario First Nations demand inquiry into wildfire response failures

The Angle: Indigenous communities in northwestern Ontario say they were left to fend for themselves during major wildfires, with evacuation support and communication from the provincial government falling dangerously short. Now tribal leaders are pushing back hard—and it's raising questions about disaster preparedness across Canada.

- Gull Bay First Nation Chief Wilfred King says the lack of communication and evacuation support should horrify all Canadians
- More than a dozen evacuations were triggered by wildfires in northwestern Ontario
- First Nation chiefs are calling for a public inquiry into Ontario's wildfire response
- Communities say they were left on their own to manage the crisis

The Accountability Question

- When disaster strikes remote communities, who's actually responsible—and what does 'evacuation support' really mean if nobody shows up?

■ Wildfire smoke crosses borders, turns US skies orange

The Angle: Ontario wildfires are sending smoke hundreds of miles south into major U.S. cities, triggering air quality crises and reigniting the cross-border climate debate. This summer's smoke patterns are normal—but the wildfires themselves are getting worse, and both countries are caught in the same hazy problem.

- Smoke from Ontario wildfires is traveling as far as New York City, turning distant city skies orange
- Air quality warnings are being triggered in U.S. cities far from the fire source
- Experts say the smoke patterns aren't unusual, but wildfires are intensifying on both sides of the border
- The smoke surge is fueling heated political rhetoric between the U.S. and Canada

The Shared Crisis

- Should wildfire-affected countries be splitting climate investment and disaster prep costs—or is this just nature doing what nature does?

■■ Supreme Court gerrymandering ruling forces Louisiana congressman out

The Angle: A Black congressman is stepping back after the Supreme Court struck down his district as an unconstitutional racial gerrymander—raising hard questions about how you draw fair maps when courts keep changing the rules.

- Rep. Cleo Fields announced he won't seek re-election to a second House term
- The Supreme Court ruled this year that his majority-Black Louisiana district was an 'unconstitutional gerrymander'
- Fields was first elected in 2022 to represent the redrawn district

The Thorny Question

- How do you draw a district map that's fair to everyone when courts keep changing what 'fair' even means?

TRENDING TODAY

■■ Influencers pushing dangerous 'tanmaxxing' trend to teens—no sunscreen required

The Angle: TikTok creators are promoting unsafe tanning practices to young audiences, mixing body oil with high-UV exposure and skipping SPF altogether. It's the latest example of wellness misinformation going viral and putting kids at real health risk.

- The trend is called 'tanmaxxing' and involves using body oil and high-UV conditions without sunscreen
- TikTok influencers are actively spreading misinformation about sun safety and tanning 'benefits' to teen audiences
- Users are overselling the supposed benefits of tanning while downplaying skin cancer and premature aging risks

The Safety Check

- How many of you—or your kids—follow tanning influencers online without realizing they're literally giving you dangerous advice?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: Name the trend - Quick context-setting -> Hosts explain what 'tanmaxxing' is and where it's spreading (TikTok, Instagram)
- Step 2: Bust the myths - Host riff or bring in caller -> Go through the false claims influencers are making—'sun exposure is healthy,' 'you don't need SPF,' etc.—and hit them with actual dermatology facts
- Step 3: The call-in - Open phone lines -> Ask listeners: Have you seen this trend? Are your teens following these accounts? What misinformation are they buying into?

LIFESTYLE CHAT

■ Manitoba finally pays retiree for surgery they twice denied

The Angle: A 69-year-old waited nearly two years fighting his province for coverage of spine surgery he had to pay for himself—and just won. It's a frustrating look at how healthcare bureaucracy can force patients to choose between their health and their wallet, even in a publicly funded system.

- Tom Molinski, 69, received a cheque for nearly $24,000 from Manitoba Health
- The province twice refused to reimburse him for out-of-country spine surgery
- He waited nearly two years before the province finally reversed course

The Frustration Factor

- Have you ever had to fight a bureaucracy for coverage they should've covered in the first place—and how long did it take to win?

www.cbc.ca (Tier 2) | Score: 74/90 (45 fit + 8 source + 21 quality) -> LEAD

■ Mental health support gaps in Caribbean-Canadian communities

The Angle: Caribbean-Canadian communities face unique barriers to mental healthcare—cultural stigma, language gaps, and underrepresentation in mental health resources. This wellness focus spotlights why mainstream mental health messaging often misses these communities and what's actually working to bridge the gap.

- Caribbean-Canadian communities experience distinct mental health barriers including cultural stigma around mental illness and limited access to culturally competent care
- Language, immigration-related stress, and underrepresentation in mental health services create significant gaps in support
- Community-led initiatives and culturally tailored mental health programs are emerging as effective models for reaching these populations

The Real Talk Opener

- How many listeners know someone in their Caribbean-Canadian circle who's struggling but won't seek help because of the stigma—and what would actually make them comfortable reaching out?

■ Don't toss your salad yet—here's what's actually safe

The Angle: A cyclospora outbreak tied to lettuce has people nervous about their produce. We're breaking down which greens are risky and which are fine—plus what you actually need to know to eat safely.

- Cyclospora is a parasite causing "explosive" diarrhea linked to contaminated lettuce
- Federal health officials are actively investigating the source of the outbreak
- The infection spreads through contaminated produce, not person-to-person contact

The Panic Check

- Have you already thrown out your lettuce, or are you waiting to hear which specific brands or types are actually unsafe?

ON-AIR BIT BREAKDOWN

- Step 1: The Lettuce Lineup - 30 seconds -> Host A holds up different lettuce types (or describes them), Host B calls out which ones are on the watch list vs. safe to eat based on the outbreak details.
- Step 2: The Storage Sniff Test - 20 seconds -> Host B shares the actual signs your lettuce might be compromised—color, smell, texture—so listeners know what to look for beyond just brand names.
- Step 3: Caller Callback - Open lines -> Hit the phones: 'Did you already toss lettuce over this? Or are you still eating it anyway?' Get real listener behavior on tape.

CLOSER: THE KICKER/GOODBYES

■ Doctor's Wild Cure: This Guy Bikes Away His Pain

The Angle: A man diagnosed with a rare, debilitating nerve condition found relief not through medication, but by riding an e-bike across the country—a story about unconventional healing that challenges how we think about chronic pain treatment.

- Gregory Maassen suffered from a rare form of neuropathy—a burning sensation that spread from his arm to his entire body from his ears to his feet
- The condition left him nearly bedridden before his doctor suggested an unlikely prescription: riding an e-bike across the country
- The unconventional treatment worked, offering Maassen significant relief from his unbearable pain

The Healing Question

- Have you ever found relief from something the doctors didn't prescribe—something totally unexpected?

■ Gordie Howe Bridge opens, but U.S. stays home due to trade tensions

The Angle: A major cross-border infrastructure project finally opens after years of delays and construction—but political friction means there's no joint celebration. It's a small sign of how trade tensions are cooling even routine diplomacy.

- The Gordie Howe International Bridge is opening this week
- Canada will celebrate the opening, but no cross-border ceremony with the U.S. is planned
- The snub comes amid U.S. trade threats against Canada
- Federal Infrastructure Minister confirmed the solo Canadian celebration

The Awkward Symbol

- When you can't even celebrate a bridge together, how bad is the trade war really getting?

■■ Trump green-lights Saudi uranium deal—here's what that means

The Angle: The Trump administration just approved a nuclear agreement that could give Saudi Arabia the ability to enrich its own uranium. This is a major geopolitical move with huge implications for Middle East stability and nuclear proliferation—and it's already sparking serious debate about whether the U.S. just handed a regional power a dangerous new tool.

- Donald Trump has approved an agreement with Saudi Arabia involving uranium enrichment capability

- The deal covers civilian nuclear program development, according to two people familiar with the matter
- The agreement could allow the kingdom to enrich uranium domestically rather than relying on outside sources

The Watercooler Flashpoint

- Is this smart diplomacy and economic partnership, or did the U.S. just create a nuclear headache in the Middle East?

■ B.C. Mounties issue Amber Alert for missing 4-year-old

The Angle: An active Amber Alert is out right now for a young child missing in British Columbia—this is the kind of breaking, real-time story that reaches listeners across the country because family safety matters to everyone, and tips from the public often crack these cases fast.

- Atlas Andrews, age 4, was last seen on Ridge Boulevard West in Kelowna, B.C. at 11:20 a.m. Tuesday
- West Kelowna RCMP issued the Amber Alert
- This is an active missing-child case—time is critical in these situations

The Alert Spread

- If you're in B.C. or have connections there, stay alert—listeners who spot anything should dial local RCMP immediately, and everyone else can help by sharing this alert in their networks.
