TODAY'S RUNDOWN SLOTS

THE LIST (5 stories)

■ Jack Hughes, who laughed at Trump's joke about the women's hockey team after his gold medal, don't find this joke funny.

The Angle: A Trump joke about the women's hockey team's gold medal win got a laugh in the moment, but now one of the guys who laughed — NHL star Jack Hughes — is walking it back. It's a quick hit on the political-meets-sports divide that always gets phones ringing.

The Debate Starter

- Was it just a joke, or did it cross a line — and does it matter who's laughing along?

■ AI hack on Canadian archive is 'the world we live in now,' expert warns

The Angle: A Canadian archive got hit by an AI-powered hack, and the expert reaction - 'the world we live in now' - is the real story: AI is making cyberattacks faster, smarter, and harder to stop for everyone, not just big institutions.

- A Canadian archive was targeted in a hack involving AI.
- An unnamed expert's blunt reaction: 'the world we live in now.'

The Debate Starter

- If AI can crack a national archive, what's actually safe anymore - your inbox, your bank, your photos?

■ Queen guitarist Brian May's nature reserve transformed 157 acres of empty farmland into home for 100,000 trees and wild animals

The Angle: A rock legend swapping guitar solos for conservation work is the kind of feel-good, against-type story that makes for an easy, broadly likable chat - everybody loves a celebrity quietly doing something genuinely good.

- Brian May, legendary guitarist of Queen, turned 157 acres of empty farmland into a nature reserve.
- The reserve is now home to roughly 100,000 trees.
- The land now supports wild animals, effectively rewilding what used to be bare farmland.

The Angle: When a state's top prosecutor and governor team up to announce next steps on a probe into an Ivy League school, that's a story with national weight - Cornell's name alone guarantees this travels well past New York.

- New York's Attorney General and Governor are expected to jointly announce next steps in an ongoing investigation into Cornell University
- Few details released yet on the scope or findings of the investigation
- Involvement of both the state's top law enforcement officer and its governor signals this is being treated as a high-priority matter

■ Ford seeks 30-year parole bar for killing police officers

The Angle: A push to toughen sentencing for killing a police officer taps into the national debate over crime, justice reform, and how far provinces can go to protect first responders — it's the kind of law-and-order story that splits listeners fast.

- Ford is pushing for a 30-year parole ineligibility period specifically for those convicted of killing a police officer.
- The move would mark one of the toughest parole restrictions tied to cop-killings on the books.
- Details on how the bar would be implemented (provincial push vs. federal Criminal Code change) are still developing.

- Is keeping your relationship totally private the smartest move in love, or does it just build up unnecessary pressure when it finally goes public?

■ AI Ran A Lab Almost Entirely On Its Own, Making New Discoveries

The Angle: An AI system reportedly planned its own experiments and had a robotic lab carry them out, landing new discoveries along the way - which is either the coolest or most unsettling thing you'll hear today, depending on how many sci-fi movies you've seen.

- The AI didn't just assist - it planned the experiments itself
- A robotic lab physically carried out the AI's experiment designs
- The process reportedly produced new scientific discoveries, not just replicated known results

The Debate Starter

- If an AI makes the discovery and a robot runs the experiment, who actually gets the credit - and should that freak us out a little?

BREAKOUT WATCH (below the show's usual engagement bar - included on editorial judgment, not metrics; producer's call)

■ Lyft to pay record $272.5 million California settlement, with at least $237 million going to drivers for lost wages and benefits

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A $272.5M settlement with $237M earmarked for driver back-pay is a concrete, huge number that plugs directly into the ongoing gig-worker-rights narrative.
The Angle: This is the biggest gig-economy settlement check written in California history, and it's real money landing in actual drivers' pockets - a huge win in the ongoing fight over how rideshare companies treat their workers.

- Lyft will pay $272.5 million to settle a California dispute - a record-setting number.
- At least $237 million of that goes directly to drivers for lost wages and benefits.
- The settlement centers on claims Lyft shortchanged drivers on pay owed under California labor rules.

The Debate Starter

- Is this proof gig companies have been underpaying drivers all along, or just the cost of doing business in California?

■ Adopted St. Louis man discovers his biological father is Michael McDonald, happy reunion ensues

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A name as recognizable as Michael McDonald attached to a surprise-reunion story gives it an instant celebrity hook most human-interest pieces lack.
The Angle: It's the ultimate DNA-test plot twist — an adoptee looking for answers ends up with a Grammy winner in the family tree, and it actually has a happy ending. Pure feel-good watercooler material with a famous-name hook built right in.

- An adopted man from St. Louis set out to find his biological parents.
- The search revealed his biological father is Michael McDonald, the Grammy-winning voice of the Doobie Brothers.
- The two have reportedly connected and the reunion has been a happy one.

The Phone-In Trigger

- Anyone on our lines ever done a DNA test and found a shocker in the family tree — good or bad?

■■ Inside Man: How Chinese spies used lies, love and betrayal to target the Federal Reserve

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): A honeypot-style espionage tale ('lies, love and betrayal') targeting the Fed reads like a spy thriller and lands amid heightened US-China tension.
The Angle: A real-life espionage story with soap-opera ingredients — lies, love, betrayal — aimed at one of the most powerful institutions in the world. It's the kind of 'you can't make this up' headline that's tailor-made for a kicker.

- Report alleges Chinese intelligence operatives used personal relationships and deception to try to get close to people connected to the Federal Reserve.
- Described as an 'inside man' style operation — playing the long game through trust and betrayal rather than hacking.
- Framed as part of a broader pattern of foreign intelligence services targeting US financial and economic institutions.

The Spy Movie Pitch

- Lies, love, betrayal, and the Fed — somebody option this for a miniseries already.

■ Christian Bale Channels 'Bruce Wayne' as Nearly $9M Backs His Foster Village Built to Keep Siblings Together

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Christian Bale literally funding a real-life 'Bruce Wayne' foster village is a clever, self-writing celebrity angle with a concrete $9M figure attached.
The Angle: The guy who played Batman is now using Batman money to keep foster siblings from being split up — a real-life superhero story that's basically too on-the-nose not to talk about.

- Christian Bale is backing a 'foster village' designed to keep sibling groups together instead of splitting them up
- The project has brought in nearly $9 million in funding
- Headline comparison practically writes itself: Bale played Bruce Wayne/Batman, now he's living out the billionaire-philanthropist side IRL

■ Forget ‘superintelligence’: error-prone AI nearly sparked world war three this month | The risks of AI aren’t what we think they are, as a recent security incident between China and the United States reveals

■ Breakout potential (editorial judgment, below the usual engagement bar): Pairing 'AI nearly caused WWIII' with real China-US tension hits the exact anxiety zeitgeist around AI risk right now and has a built-in scare headline.
The Angle: Forget killer-robot sci-fi — the real AI danger right now is a buggy system misreading a signal and nearly triggering a US-China military incident. That's a wake-up call way bigger than any chatbot story.

- A security incident this month involved AI error nearly escalating tensions between China and the United States.
- The warning isn't about futuristic 'superintelligence' — it's about AI systems making mistakes right now in high-stakes situations.
- Details are still emerging, but the core claim: an AI-driven miscalculation came close to sparking a major international flashpoint.

The Debate Starter

- We've all been worried about AI getting too smart — should we actually be more scared of AI screwing up?
